On June 30, when NBC option hours changed, we experimented with scheduling our already owned RKO and 20th Century-Fox pictures at 5 P.M. We thought our Richmond audience—especially our adult audience—would prefer the best in movies during the late afternoon. Now the ARB figures prove we were right. So we have added the fabulous MGM library! The figures could keep going up and up and UP. You're invited to go right along with us—on WXEX-TV, the Richmond area's basic NBC-TV station.

NEWSMAKER of the week

One of the best-known figures in Chicago, and one of the best-liked figures in the broadcasting business, has received a new promotion. Jules Herbuveaux is moving from v.p. and general manager of NBC's owned stations in Chicago, to vice-president, Central Division, for NBC.

The newsmaker: Saxophonist, orchestra leader, vaudeville producer, pioneer broadcaster, golfer and raconteur extraordinaire. Jules Herbuveaux has operated in many fields—and made friends in all of them.

His new assignment as head of the NBC Central Division will move him into an area of over-all company operations with broad duties, including liaison with NBC's parent company, RCA, with talent, with sponsors. "He will be," says one NBC executive, "a midwest Grover Whelan for the company."

There is a consensus in the business that Herbuveaux represents an ideal choice. He is, as noted, a superb raconteur, with a fund of available stories estimated into thousands. He is a master at any conversation, business or pleasure, thanks to a sparkling vocabulary and ear for colorful phrasing. "Jules doesn't use old clichés," a co-worker reports; "he makes new ones."

Jules Herbuveaux

He is an avid Chicagoan, on social terms with everyone from politicians to business men to taxi drivers. This chauvinism springs, as it frequently does, from an adopted son. Born in Utica, N. Y., he attended high school in Chicago. At the time the U. S. entered World War I he was an engineering student at McGill University, Montreal. He served as a chief gunner's mate during the war.

He returned to Chicago where he organized a dance orchestra, did the first musical "remote" from Guyon's Paradise Ball Room and conducted the first musical program on pioneer station KYW. During that period he was recording with his orchestra, traveling through the midwest as producer for the Keith-Orpheum circuit and acting as musical director for several Chicago stations. He joined NBC in 1927 (the year it opened its local offices) as musical director.

He moved up through management ranks, becoming program manager in 1939, tv manager in 1949, general manager of both stations in 1954. His creativity in programing is reflected by the early tv "Chicago School" which bore his personal stamp.

He is a member of the Chicago Mayor's Committee, The Broadcast Pioneer's Club, Society of TV Pioneers and is v.p. of the Tavern Club. He is married, has three daughters, and lives in suburban Wilmette. His hobbies are golf (he plays at Sunset Ridge Country Club) and private short wave radio (he operates W9SGM).

THE IMAGE OF BELIEVABILITY

The National Bank of Detroit's new black-square main office building under construction in the heart of the downtown business district.

Vast construction projects are in progress throughout Detroit:

impressive new office buildings, shopping centers, expressways, a huge convention hall on the waterfront. All are visible evidence of the city's vigor and faith in the future.

Equally believable is WWJ-TV's traditional leadership and community stature. These are plus values of tremendous importance to every advertiser.

To be sure this fall, be sure to use WWJ-TV, Detroit's Believability Station.

You can forget the time-honored principle that it's suicide to get palsy with a district sales manager. Today, it's exactly the reverse:

In the package goods field, the marketing revolution has boosted the district manager's importance so high that tv and radio stations and their reps will have to concentrate on him more and more. Here's why the emphasis has shifted from headquarters to the fellow on the firing line:

1) The expansion of the private label is changing the media strategy of many a national packaged goods advertiser to enable him to maintain a more fluid local front.

2) The key to what's happening here is the competition between dominant grocery chains in a particular market. If one chain elects to focus the advertising on its private labels, the competitor often uses the opposite strategy of promoting national brands heavily. It becomes axiomatic for the district manager of the national brand to move in with his own advertising support. Marketers report that this shifting of money into regional and local media will mount in tempo and size for at least the next six months.

3) But note that this automatically raises the national vs. local rate question. The private-label seller naturally will demand a local rate, while the national-brand seller theoretically has to pay the national rate. For the implications of this muddle, see the article on page 27 and the editorial on page 86.

New spot radio business took off with a whoosh this week. The roster of accounts scheduled for September launching:

- Campbell Soup (BBDO): 26 weeks in 35 markets with varied time segments.
- Peter Paul (DFS): 75 I.D.'s a week in 46 markets via package buys.
- Mueller Co. (DCSS): 10 announcements a week for 17 weeks in 48 markets.
- Eveready Batteries and Prestone (Esty): nine announcements per week for eight weeks in a long list of markets; will lay off 1 December and resume about a month later.
- Kiwi shoe polish (Cohen & Aleshire): 10-20 announcements a week for 10 weeks.
- Chattanooga Medicine (Cohen & Aleshire): five spots a week for 32 weeks.
- PM Laboratories (Allan Marin & Associates, Chicago): will expand market by market for Teen Clear, which it had been testing in Minnesota and Iowa.
- Leeds Chemical (Mohr & Eicoff, Chicago): Planning to expand its M-O-Lene and Wool-O-Lene products into 15 or 16 markets, predominantly in the Midwest.

The cold remedies started spotting their fall tv spot campaigns the past week. They include Anahist (Bates), Vick, and Four-Way (Cohen & Aleshire).

P.S.: Vick also is reported to be buying into the NTA network.

One reason the spot picture looks so rosy for the coming year: national advertisers are becoming increasingly aware of the need for allowing their regional offices to make their own marketing decisions (often for reasons listed in Item No. 1 above).

That's why you'll find the topflight agencies strengthening their setups in such places as Dallas, Houston, Atlanta, and Miami.

The broad policies will be coming out of New York, but the day-to-day decisions will be determined by the exigencies of local situations within the various regions.

August network tv didn't turn out to be quite so soft as had been expected early in the year.

Each network has but five half-hours less of sponsored nighttime than it had in August of 1957.

The comparison of total nighttime half-hours sold:

AUGUST	ABC TV	CBS TV	NBC TV
1958	28½	44½	43
1957	33½	49½	38¾

The three tv networks this week had a total of 230 daytime quarter-hours with "sold" tags for the fall.

By individual network, the quarter-hours sold and the percentages of the daytime programed: ABC TV, 54 segments, 90%; CBS TV, 96½ segments, 74%; NBC TV, 80 segments, 70%.

Meantime ABC TV is planning to add another 10 quarter-hours to the 60 it already has announced for the fall.

Note: At the present time NBC has 51 daytime sponsored quarter-hours to CBS' total of 84½. A year ago it was NBC, 47½, CBS, 91½.

Like NBC TV, CBS TV is showing around a new presentation on daytime.

The CBS pitch basically is directed at advertisers who have less than a half million dollars to spend on this facet of the medium.

The presentation puts the focus on the advantageous cost-per-thousand of daytime tv as compared to women's magazines.

(See 9 August SPONSOR-SCOPE for areas covered by NBC TV's daytime presentation.)

Watch for the tv networks to adopt the flight principle of saturation spot.

It will be aimed at smaller advertisers who want frequency but can't afford 13-week cycles. The suggested plan will be along these lines: Go on for six weeks, take leave for seven weeks, then come back for a seven-week run.

NBC's Telesales Department (closed circuit telecasting) introduces a new twist in retail marketing this fall.

It will be the first of a series of programs in which NBC TV affiliated stations in 60 markets will serve as viewing arenas.

Manufacturers will use the programs to unveil their new lines for retail buyers and the people that push the goods behind the counter. The proceedings will be interlarded with sales training by top experts in the retail field and include entertainment.

The rates for participating segments: 10 minutes, $7,500; 20 minutes, $15,000.

The cost of putting out a simple recorded jingle just about has doubled in the past two years.

In fact, if you come out with a bill of $1,700, you're doing well. These rising costs, agencies say, have made it imperative that the talent bill be paired to a minimum and the mechanical side of the assignment be operated at stopwatch efficiency.

The following is an updated breakdown of expenses for what may be considered an average one-minute jingle c.t.:

Four musicians (one hour rehearsal)	$135.00
Contribution to the AFM's trust fund for use of jingle	100.00
Vocal quartette (one hour rehearsal) including taxes	200.00
Announcer (one hour rehearsal) scale plus taxes	60.00
Jingle writer, composer, and arranger	750.00
Studio rental, tapes, editing, and assembling	125.00
Master and pressings (100 copies), packaging, shipping, city tax	295.00
TOTAL	$1,665.00

Earle Ludgin appears to have revived a tactic that's been dormant among agencies: sending out several "task forces" among stations to cement relations for an account.

The account in this instance is Tidy House Products Co. The task forces include not only timebuyers but also some agency top brass.

During their visits the delegations will, of course, try to improve Tidy's spots.

Motivated by the report that Rival Packing canceled out of McCann-Erickson because the agency wouldn't travel its timebuyers, SPONSOR-SCOPE this week quizzed a group of Madison Avenue timebuyers on the traveling idea.

Opinion fell into two categories:

(1) Contacts on the scene are valuable to the agency and client only if a special problem is involved.

(2) There are a lot of other convenient avenues for a buyer to learn things about a market—such as agency branch offices, client fieldmen, information from stations and reps when requested or, otherwise, occasional brochures, and periodic visits from station managers.

Remarked one timebuyer wryly: "Anyway, who's got time to go traveling on an expense account? To get to know a market and its stations in depth you'd have to stay a week. If I got away from this desk for even a week, it would take me two or three weeks to catch up with my work. Let 'em hire service people to do the traveling."

The next big competitive rush in the detergent field: a liquid to compete with Wisk for washing-machine use.

General Electric is reported bringing out a washer designed expressly for heavy-duty liquid detergents.

Due to feel the impact of a strong move toward washer detergents is Tide, which by itself last year turned in a $10-million profit for P&G.

Burnett's stake in the Philip Morris exploits continues to grow.

The agency's responsibility has been extended to PM's new brand, Mayfield, a mint-flavored mentholate, which currently is being tested in Portland and Seattle.

As far as the number of cigarette brands are concerned, Burnett now has as many as Esty (R. J. Reynolds' lone agency for many years).

Lorillard's Old Gold and Kent is also under a single roof: Lennen & Newell.

Radio station managers are getting more voluble in wondering whether their own guiding forces of new business development haven't got themselves in a rut.

The managers feel that the same old tunes are being sung over and over again—but louder—and that too few efforts are being made to create areas of new radio business afforded by new marketing opportunities.

Another intramural criticism: Too much time, money, and energy are being devoted to chasing sources of possible revenue that long ago gave evidence of being fruitless.

The mantle for aggressive promotion-mindedness is rapidly shifting from Madison Avenue to Midwest agencies.

While Madison Avenue thinks in terms of big buys, the Midwest is disposed to dream up big stunts to go with their relatively small buys. The idea appears to be: beat the drum instead of the ratecard.

A sizzling case in point: Needham, Louis & Brorby's promotion for Oklahoma Oil ($2-million biller) in the Indiana area. The agency used every merchandising gimmick in the book, including an hour's Herb Shriner show over a tailored hook-up of 29 tv and radio stations. The razzle-dazzle included street parades and free gifts at all of Oklahoma Oil's service stations.

National spot radio did 7.8% better for the first six months of 1958 than it did for the like period of 1957.

The figure for the 1958 half was $93,574,000 and for the 1957 half, $86,770,000. In other words, spot radio continues its unbroken upward climb.

CBS TV has returned to the 20-minute-segment pattern as an incentive for advertisers who may be interested in the Perry Mason hourly series.

The price for a third of the show, time and talent, is $60,000 gross. Maximum discounts would reduce this to about $52,000 per broadcast.

The last time the network had such an arrangement in effect was with the original Gleason show. (ABC TV likewise is selling its Sunset Strip in 20-minute segments.)

Madison Avenue agencies probing into the local vs. national rate situation have uncovered curious paradoxes and sidelights.

For instance, they've discovered regional products in Indiana, Oklahoma, Texas, Virginia, and Florida are granted a sort of "favorite son" protection — that is, the local rate. (See page 27 for more on the local rate problem.)

Trying to liberalize the rules on product protection during the daytime has become quite frustrating for CBS TV and NBC TV.

The main source of the networks' woes are accounts taking their maiden dip into daytime tv.

Their schizoid behavior shapes itself along these lines: First, they complain about the package goods giants checker-boarding their buys so as to keep out the competition. But when the network makes it possible for the newcomer to squeeze in with 15 minutes' protection for their product on either side, they argue that they should have much longer protection—preferably an hour.

CBS TV still is running slightly ahead in average ratings and numbers of home per minute of viewing.

The 11 June Nielsen count showed these relative standings:

NETWORK	AVG. DAY RATING	AVG. HOMES	AVG. NIGHT RATING	AVG. HOMES
CBS TV	6.9	2,808,000	18.8	7,726,000
NBC TV	6.4	2,525,000	17.5	7,183,000
ABC TV	8.0*	3,117,000*	13.6	5,342,000

*ABC TV was programing far less daytime than the other networks in June.

Take it from a network president who prefers to remain unquoted, the fall outlook for both spot tv and spot radio is comparatively bright.

As overseer of the spot as well as the network activities of his organization, he notes that spot users appear to have their plans for the next six months in far better shape than network buyers.

His observations to SPONSOR-SCOPE this week on the same theme included these:

- With smaller budgets at their disposal, spot people plan better, are much more meticulous in getting the maximum for the dollar, and are closer to the cash register and the goods on the shelf. They're also quick to pick up a good franchise.
- The network buyer is inclined to be impulsive, plans less tightly, gambles for big stakes, and is given to maneuvering for position by the big deal.

Nothing's too good for Channel 2 watchers in Eastern Iowa. Besides lighting up at night (in color), this grounded version of Collin's aircraft weather radar gismo allows the WMT-TV audience to get its weather wholesale.

How it works. The plastic headdome is connected to the shindome; the shindome rotates 360°, spitting out impulses which hate weather; along comes a storm, say, and echoes beat it back to the wishdome which is connected to the scopedome which delivers a picture of the disturbance. This causes rejoicing in the autonomous news room* because newsdomes hate storms too and everyone gathers round while the scope on the weather set goes on camera and bang!

Any questions?

The Radar Stations

National Reps: The Katz Agency

* It declared its independence one Fourth of July recently. The News Center operates for both radio and television. Facilities are consolidated at the tv station, with remote radio control. Included: Three major wire services supplying five leased wires; a leased wire to the Weather Bureau (in case our radar gismo gets autonomous), plus a private weather forecasting service; two picture services (AP and UP) for tv news. Staff includes six regular newsmen, a full time photographer, two people on Sports, and two on Farm; more than a hundred correspondents in surrounding communities supply area news and pictures.

Timebuyers at work

Chuck Helfrich, media director of Donahue & Coe's newly organized Los Angeles office, who buys for Los Angeles Pepsi Cola Bottlers and Slenderella Frozen Foods, feels that agencies with branch offices ought to put these offices to work. "The concept of an office strictly for the servicing of tv production is outdated," he says flatly, pointing to the many recent agency mergers as proof of this. "The primary purpose of the mergers," Chuck says, "is to widen the scope of service—in the fullest sense—for the current or potential client. But even so, there are many large agencies with these facilities already established which stick to the entrenched habit of buying from the New York office." Chuck feels that these agencies aren't taking advantage of the many capable people they have in their branch offices. "These people are in a position to buy efficiently and effectively," he says. "They know the peculiarities of their own market and stations from first-hand experience and observation, what will or won't sell the advertisers' products locally—factors that can't be learned studying figures."

Andy Anderson, Geoffrey Wade Advertising, Chicago, points out that because client appropriations for spot have risen tremendously in the past few years, the timebuyer's responsibilities have increased. "The buying problem he now faces requires a far more extensive knowledge of the medium than was required in past buying methods," Andy points out. "In buying a certain market for an advertiser today, not only ratings must be considered. They are important, of course, but this is only one measure of desirability. Some of the other factors that must be considered today are client sales charts, station coverage, audience composition, station programming and integrity, and merchandising services." Andy also notes that his agency is concerned with the problem of triple spotting and places premium value on those stations which space the announcements. It favors, too, stations which, after a buy is made, constantly strive to improve the rate structure for second-year advertisers. "And one more point, it would save a lot of time if reps submitted availabilities on standardized forms."

Commercial commentary

Consider the mashed potato

Among the slickest, most professional commercials I've caught on daytime tv were a couple I saw on the CBS show "The Verdict is Yours" for French's Instant Mashed Potato.

I don't know who was responsible for planning the French job, and I've purposely not tried to find out. But whoever he was, I'd like to address some free, avuncular advice to his boss:

Your boy is good. He's obviously a real advertising man—not just a technician or specialist. His French spots show clear thinking, sound planning, and a sure-footed approach to a sales problem. I'd guess he's of management caliber. Better hang on to him.

If this seems surprisingly high praise for a couple of commercials which you yourself may not find very interesting or spectacular, let me explain my critical position.

To me, as an advertising man, there's a shocking tendency in the broadcasting industry (among the non-pros) to applaud all the wrong things in tv commercials, and to drool over certain announcements for all the wrong reasons.

Take the matter of cuteness. Here in New York, for instance, the Bert and Harry Piel beer spots have been widely praised as "good" commercials, simply because they're so cute.

But, from an advertising standpoint, this is sheer nonsense. Mere cuteness does not make a commercial good advertising, any more than mere cuteness makes a girl a good washerwoman. You've got to look for more fundamental qualifications, as well.

Mere technique is not enough

Another thing that seems to befuddle the boys' judgment is the technical aspects of producing commercials. They got so tangled up with the difficult problems of semi-animation and split screens, and original musical scores, and whether the lettering does a maypole dance before spelling out Mother, that they tend to think of these things as ends in themselves.

To hear some of them talk, you'd think that a commercial was "good" because it required a camera crew to spend six weeks on location at Pugwash, Nova Scotia, or because the sound was piped through three filters and four echo chambers, or because, as one young agency producer once boasted to me, the entire spot was "visual"—no spoken or printed words of any kind.

All this may be art. But it ain't necessarily good advertising.

Nor does the popularity of a commercial mean very much. This morning I received a letter from a Hollywood film studio, urging me to mention in this column, certain commercials which had been voted "most popular in the Los Angeles area."

I haven't yet seen these spots, so I'm not going to name them. But if they ever do get rave notices here, it won't be because they were picked by a panel of Pasadena Penelopes as the "commercials

"WHAT'S IT ALL ABOUT MR. DILLON?"

"Well, Chester, seems they got another one of those ARB ratings down in Shreveport, and I reckon you, Doc, Kitty and I can be mighty proud 'cause our show came in first place. In fact, the station we're on, KSLA-TV, got 8 of the TOP 10 shows . . . and 18 of the TOP 25.

And it led the audience in 227 out of 414 quarter hours in the week.

It's great to be a part of the number one network, Chester, but something else that impresses folks about KSLA-TV is the way it originates a lot of shows on its own designed for people right there in the Ark-La-Tex.

Its local news and weather, for instance, have always been the ones most people prefer. (33.6 to 13.4 at 6:00 PM).

Well, that oughta take care of any confusion you might have had about ARB ratings in Shreveport. Care to amble over to the Long Branch for a spell?"

we find just too dreamy for words." Such popularity may be (from an advertising standpoint) entirely undeserved.

In saying this, I don't mean to seem contemptuous of honest copy research. Research can be wonderfully helpful, providing you know how to use it. But before you begin relying on consumer panels or other tests, you should have your own set of critical standards.

Three important questions

In judging any radio or tv commercial, I try to ask myself these three questions: First, what is, or at least seems to be, the company or product's real sales problem? Second, how well, and how thoughtfully has the commercial been planned to meet and solve this sales problem? Third (but only third), how well has it been executed—with how much originality, imagination, distinctiveness and sparkle?

And now, with this long-winded preamble, let's get back to the French Mashed Potato commercials, which I admire so much.

French's problem, with its Instant Mashed Potato, is obviously that of introducing a new, and somewhat unbelievable, product in the highly specialized grocery and supermarket field. It is competing with fresh, frozen, and even canned potatoes. It must not only explain quickly how Instant Mashed Potato works, but must overcome the housewife's traditional prejudice in favor of old fashioned methods, and in many cases, her previous unhappy experiences with other dehydrated foods.

It must sell real benefits in order to justify a somewhat higher price than for fresh potatoes. And, because it sells through supermarkets, it must make awfully sure that women know what the package looks like, since they won't find it either among the fresh vegetables, or in the frozen food bins.

These, then, are some of the sales realities around which French's tv commercials must be built. And it's a real pleasure to see how French faces them.

The way of a pro

A typical French commercial opens with a shot of a housewife in a kitchen. In response to the announcer's question, she admits she's making mashed potatoes. When he chides her for doing it the hard, old fashioned way, the ricer and potato masher fly suddenly out of her hand and disappear. There's a quick cut to a close up demonstration of making mashed potatoes with French's mix (package well in evidence) followed by shots of mashed potatoes being served in various ways, and ending again with the package, being opened, and the two envelopes of the mix being displayed.

The narrator not only explains the French method, but emphasizes ease and time saving, taste (made from real Idahos), convenience (helpful when you're cooking for children), cooking opportunities (you can make wonderful shepherd's pies with mashed potato tops), quantity (eight generous servings), package (two envelopes).

It's a complete, convincing, close-packed, smooth flowing sales pitch. And the beauty of it is—it looks so easy.

That, of course, is the mark of the real pro in any field, including advertising. Watching these French commercials, I get the same feeling I used to get in seeing Joe DiMaggio go back for a long drive, or Charlie Gehringer pivot for the double play. There are no false moves, no waste motions, no foolish showboating. Just the swift, smooth, sureness of a guy who really knows his job.

Congratulations, boy—whoever you are!

A correction

Thanks for your very excellent article on Alaska (19 July, SPONSOR). We surely appreciate all the facts you published on the market. However, there was one minor discrepancy.

Effective April 1st, KTVA and KTVF, the CBS affiliate stations, started broadcasting at 11:30 a.m. due to the tremendous local business. As a result of this many new advertisers have entered the market. Procter & Gamble ordered all their daytime programs, etc. These daytime programs proved tremendously popular. Midnight Sun Broadcasting stations, KENI and KFAR-TV commercially broadcast at 4:45 p.m. not 3:00 p.m.

Once again, many thanks for your fine article.

A suggestion

I thought you might be interested in a suggestion for a slight possible improvement in your fine magazine.

I am enclosing the Comparagraph pages that I cut out of SPONSOR every time these lists appear. This is definitely one of the most valuable sources of information that is available to Reps in their day-to-day selling, and I have seen many Reps and Time Buyers use these pages in their daily work.

The problem is that it is one helluva job to get these sheets out without clipping off the vital information in the middle of the page. I just wonder if it wouldn't be possible to put a slightly wider margin in the inside of the magazine, or perhaps print the Comparagraph near the back of the book, where taking it would be easier.

Thanks for the consistent excellence of your publication, and the provocative and informative articles you run.

THREE KEY ADVERTISING AGENCIES HAVE ASKED STATIONS TO CLARIFY LOCAL RATE POLICIES

Frank Kemp, Compton

COMPTON has asked stations for "economic justification" on their local rate policies, is investigating the extent of rate differentials and comparing them with newsprint.

L. D. Farnath, Ayer

AYER has sent questionnaires to 150 stations in markets of varying sizes, asking: "Do you have a local rate?" and, if so, "How does an advertiser qualify for it?"

Lee Rich, B&B

B&B is conducting a survey of local and regional rates and rate protections given regional advertisers in the states of Indiana, Oklahoma, Florida, and Texas.

Local rate muddle at boiling point

- ✓ In recent weeks advertising agency interest in problem of local radio/tv rate structures has mounted
- ✓ Major radio/tv advertisers want to know two simple facts: who is entitled to the local rate, and why?

Local vs. national rate problems, a king-size trouble center for the air media over a score or more of years, are stirring up new, even more violent frictions right now.

Within recent weeks such major agencies as Compton, Benton & Bowles, and N. W. Ayer have been leaping into the controversy with demands that stations explain, clarify, and "justify" rates given to local, regional, and retail advertisers.

The special significance of these moves is that these agencies handle many large national accounts (P&G.

Standard Brands, General Foods, Armour, etc.) which heretofore have not been particularly concerned with the local rate squabble. What stirs them up now is that they think regional competitors are getting a better rate break.

Their activity comes on top of increasingly strong pressures from such well-known local-rate advocates as the automotive, gasoline, tire, beer, and bottling industries. They, too, want to know if they are getting the best possible buy.

Because of the vital importance to spot radio and tv of the troublesome local rate issue, SPONSOR has surveyed agencies, advertisers, reps, stations, and station groups about these fast moving new developments. Here's a summary of the findings:

- 1) Present pressure for simplification and "rationalization" of local rate policies is no flash in the pan.
- 2) You can expect it to get louder, stronger, and more insistent until major stations find satisfactory solutions.
- 3) Demands for simpler, clearer, more reasonable definitions of "who pays local rates and why?" are not (as some stations and reps have feared) merely a prelude to new price-cutting tactics. Advertisers and agencies are trying to make sound business sense out of what has become a hazy, fuzzy rate situation at many stations and in many markets.
- 4) There's little tendency to underestimate the problems faced by stations in setting and sticking to sound local

Three possible solutions to local vs. national rate dilemma

1 Retail Store Designation. Many agency men suggest that stations should grant local rates only to merchants who actually "own and operate a local retail store." This is in line with a practice common among leading newspapers. Objections to this suggestion are that many chain stores feature product copy in competition with national accounts; some stores have multiple branches and affiliates; and limiting local rates to this classification alone would cut off certain local advertisers, now given low-rate privileges.

2 Account Groups. More popular among reps and station owners seems to be the "account group" concept, such as used by the Storz stations. Under this plan a station specifies certain types or groups of accounts which always take the national rate, and others which always enjoy local rates. Decisions are made on the character of the product, rather than a definition of "local interest." Critics of this type of plan say that the problem is to explain why certain products (such as beer and ale) belong in a "national" group, while others (such as "soft drink bottlers") get local rates.

3 The Single Rate. The single rate concept for station operation undoubtedly is increasing in popularity—notably among tv stations. Single rate stations have a sole rate card for all types of business. The big problem, of course, arises when a station switches from a double to a single rate structure and must explain the change to local advertisers. Usually such changes mean a rise in local rates, with national rates remaining about the same. Strong stations in many markets have found they can operate profitably under this system. But local conditions prevent many station owners from attempting it.

rate policies. But there's general agreement that the element of suspicion must be removed from decisions on who gets what rate.

5) Three possible approaches to the rate question are receiving attention these days from responsible station owners—1) rigid classifications of accounts, 2) retail store designation and 3) the single rate.

6) Though agencies, advertisers, reps, and SRA are all working on the problem, the real responsibility for solution rests with individual station operators. This is both because local conditions must dictate local policies, and because of various legal issues.

What triggered the new explosions over local rates was undoubtedly the action of Tracy, Locke in canceling spots for Maryland Club and Admiration coffees on Oklahoma stations that were found to be giving preferential rates to local coffee brands.

Agencies handling national coffee accounts such as B&B (Maxwell House) and Compton (Chase & Sanborn) moved in fast to examine the Oklahoma situation, and discovered regional and local rate implications which apply to many other products and markets.

Both Compton and B&B have indicated to SPONSOR that they plan to expand, and widen their rate investigations. Meanwhile N. W. Ayer, surveying 150 radio and tv stations in behalf of several clients, uncovered evidence of equivocal local rate structures in at least 30% of stations questioned. Leslie D. Farnath, Ayer's media v.p. (see cut) is reported anxious to help clean up the local rate situation in behalf of all agencies and advertisers.

Behind such agitation for local rate clarification lie two major factors—one known and recognized as a perennial problem of the broadcast media, while the second is an outgrowth of the changing patterns of marketing and distribution.

For many years, distributors, district offices, chains, jobbers, dealer associations, and manufacturers representatives have been beating at the doors of tv and radio stations to get local rates for what is essentially national advertising.

In recent months, perhaps due in part to the recession, this pressure has been getting stronger, tougher, and more tempting to station owners. Last spring, for example, Gulf Oil, a heavy user of national spot, switched over completely to a local buying policy and apparently has succeeded in getting some (though by no means all) of its station list to accept copy at local rates.

In another case reported to SPONSOR a leading cigarette manufacturer has field representatives who sometimes contact stations direct for special advertising drives at local rates. Meantime in certain sections of the country (notably the Southeast) rate tactics almost have wiped out any clear definition of what constitutes a local rate, leading rep firms imply. And, reports SRA, there still are a few brokers or "operators" who buy time at local rates and attempt to job-lot it to national accounts.

But by no means all of the confusion about rate structures can be traced to these standard headaches. Much more significant to such firms as General Foods, P&G and others, is what has been happening in marketing.

- Today many big chains, which qualify for local or retail rates, are pushing their own private brands of coffee, shortenings, desserts, and other products in direct competition with national brands. So national advertisers want to know why private-brand competitors should be given preferential rate treatment.

- In addition, many local businesses, such as department stores, have established branches in suburbs or outlying towns, yet continue to get rates based on a limited trading area.

- Products which once were confined strictly to a local market, such as bread, are now marketed in country-wide and state-wide areas.

- Meanwhile, many national advertisers are developing products for limited or regional distribution. The pinpoint technique of marketing is in general use. Certain industries (rubber, for instance) have companies operating retail stores (like Firestone) which are directly in competition with other rubber companies with different marketing patterns.

All of this tends to confuse and befuddle the reasons and justifications for a "local rate." And say, agencies, advertisers and reps, most stations have not yet worked out any clear-cut rate philosophy.

Last spring in a bold move, widely heralded in the industry, the Storz stations set up a new, clear-cut set of regulations to handle the problem.

(Please turn to page 66)

Dr. Seymour Banks, media research director: "Not only did we pioneer the simulcast, but we were among the first to drop it when its usefulness had passed."

Harry McMahon, tv commercials v.p.: "Our creative credo in tv advertising is simply this: We take the inherent drama of the product itself and capitalize on that. . . ."

Len Matthews, media v.p.: "We believe in constantly challenging media stereotypes—not just change for the sake of change, but a constant evaluation of current and future strategy."

The Leo Burnett air media strategy

✦ Creative art and copy isn't enough, say Burnett executives; media buying must also be creative as well

✦ In air media, buyers look for "reach" (number of tv homes), "frequency" (how often each home is reached)

Leo Burnett: "When you reach for the stars, you may not quite get one, but you won't come up with a handful of mud, either."

Exactly 23 years ago this month, an advertising agency was formed in Chicago with two things: a staff of eight people and a policy of striving for the most creative ideas possible.

Today, Leo Burnett Company has a staff of 800, but the creative policy hasn't changed. The agency's now-famous philosophy of "reaching for the stars" has earned it a reputation for eye-catching art and copy, and an annual billing (last year) in excess of $80 million.*

Yet what few people know about the second largest Chicago-based ad agency (behind FC&B) is that its creative philosophy extends beyond the copy and art departments. In fact, Burnett's spirit of creativity permeates through the entire organization even to a department where you'd least expect to find it: media.

Len Matthews, Burnett v.p. in charge of media, puts it this way: "Our attitude can be summed up by these two basic principles or philosophies. We believe in constantly challenging media stereotypes—not just change for the sake of change—but a constant evaluation of current and future media strategy to make sure it's on the target. . . . The fact that we did thus-and-so last year is never a reason for us to continue a media strategy without a complete re-evaluation of the problems.

"Second, I think we are a scientific media department," continues Matthews, "equally as concerned with marketing as with media—but at the same time, not tied down or fenced in with

*Of this, 61% is placed in air media.

BURNETT VARIETY

How Burnett works variety into a series of commercials for the same product is shown in these Marlboro commercials. Depending on the commercial position, one of five basic themes is used: the famous "Marlboro Man"; what Burnett calls "slice of life" sequences; the Ralph and Bertha series; a cartoon series; and Julie London singing a commercial in romantic style slide rules. But I also think we are a creative media department—long on consideration of the qualitative factors in media planning such as prestige, authority and visibility, but not so carried away with these things that we forget to put some quantitative sizes on them."

Matthews' department includes a total of 117 people, including 16 time-buyers and 10 group supervisors. Of these, 18 work in the all-important area of media-marketing analysis. "We believe there is too much lip service and too little performance in most sectors in relating media plans to marketing."

Pointing out an example of a Burnett "creative media buy," Dr. Seymour Banks, Burnett media research director, notes that "We were among the very first to appreciate the values of simulcasting. During the early days of tv, our research indicated that there was a great deal of switching over to tv during daytime hours. So to create even patterns of listener strength, we bought both network radio and tv during the day, notably the Arthur Godfrey Show and Art Linkletter's Houseparty, on a simulcast basis for Pillsbury and other clients. Not only did we pioneer the simulcast, but we were among the first to drop it when its usefulness had passed."

Burnett's pioneering of the simulcast on network is just one example of creativity as it applies to their broadcast media planning. Early in 1951, the media creativity pioneered another movement which today is standard procedure for many advertisers introducing new products: market-by-market introduction of the product. This, coupled with the first spot placement of a program, made it a dual pace-maker in broadcasting annals.

Eight years ago, when the Kellogg Company introduced Sugar Pops on the west coast, the Burnett Company bought spot markets there for its Wild Bill Hickok Show. And as Sugar Pops moved eastward across the country, the Wild Bill Hickok show moved right along with it in spot tv, market-by-market.

This spring when the Kellogg Adventure strip programs were replaced in spot after a year on network tv, the Burnett Company led the way for bringing national rates to programs in spot markets. (See SPONSOR 28 June 1958.)

Today's reckoning of rating points

as a measure of spot weight in media planning is another creative concept of the Burnett media department. "We learned long ago," says Matthews, "That it's not the number of spots, but rather what the spots deliver in reach and frequency that is the important factor." Reach (the percentage of tv homes reached in a given period,) and frequency (how often each home is reached, innovated by the Burnett company several years ago) are measurements now used widely by many ad agencies in figuring spot tv buying goals.

A current example of the Burnett broadcasting pioneering is the 52-week spot package for Marlboro. An investment of over $3 million, it makes Marlboro the only other national sponsor of year-round sports events (Gillette's Cavalcade of Sports the other) offering such features as baseball's Game of the Week on alternate Saturdays and Sundays on CBS-TV, professional football on CBS-TV on Saturdays and Sundays, and basketball and hockey in their respective seasons.

Media research at Burnett reveals that hockey is the highest rated of any network broadcast sports feature in the wintertime.

Telecasts of the Marlboro sports events vary from 1/4 to 1/2 of each game in various sections of the country. The number of commercial positions require a broad pool of commercial subjects. Utilizing five basic themes, these formats are used for variation: The famous "Marlboro Man"; what Burnett calls "Slice of Life" sequences; and for humor, the "Ralph and Bertha" series; a Marlboro cartoon series; and the Julie London romantic singing commercials. These five basic formats are all used and rotated within the sports telecasts.

"For believability," says Harry McMahon, Burnett v.p. in charge of tv commercials, "We have found the use of personal salesmen very effective. Our early use of Godfrey, Moore and Linkletter bears this out. Currently, for example, in the case of Chas. Pfizer & Company (Agricultural sales division), we are using an accepted farm authority, Dave Livingston, to deliver the message. Dave is a farmer himself, and when he speaks of animal health products, the farmers listen."

Why advertisers cross-plug on net tv

If you've wondered about the effectiveness of the cross-plug technique on network tv—that is the practice of dropping one commercial on a program in order to get in a single announcement on a succeeding day or week—then NBC's new study provides clear evidence of the value of this increasingly popular maneuver.

NBC research shows that national advertisers who employ cross-plugging reach millions of additional homes.

The average evening half hour program, for instance, using an average station list, gets a Nielsen rating of 23. If an advertiser uses his full commercial time on one half hour show, he's delivering advertising messages to 9,100,000 tv homes.

But if he drops one minute of his commercials and takes a cross-plug on the following week's show, he delivers his story to 12,500,000 homes. That's the equivalent of getting a 31.5 rating for the same expenditure.

Daytime gains are equally impressive. An advertiser using his full three minutes of commercial time on an average daytime quarter hour program, with an average station lineup, reaches 3,400,000 homes. His rating is 8.7.

But by cross-plugging he gets better than a 50% bonus. In shifting one commercial to a spot on a succeeding day's show, he ups his rating to 13 and delivers messages to 5,100,000 homes.

The big reason for these sizeable gains is, of course, the changing composition of the audience for any particular program. Homes viewing a show on one day are not exactly those viewing it on a succeeding day or week. Thus, the advertiser using cross-plugs is really selling to two different audiences, and reaches a considerably greater number of different homes.

In figuring out these impressive statistics on the values of the cross-plug, NBC used a combination of Nielsen figures including data on average audiences (minute-by-minute viewing) and on audience composition. One interesting fact: the lower the rating, the greater the advantages to the advertiser in cross-plugging.

➤ Cross-plugs provide sizable gains in the total number of homes reached—by both daytime and evening shows

How AMF sets 'em up in the summer

➤ To combat a hot weather slump in bowling, AMF's bowling division is backing a current $750,000 campaign

➤ Network tv is used to attract new bowlers; spot radio to change the regular (winter season) bowling habits

One of the most flamboyant spenders in air media this summer is a company that makes bowling equipment, a recreation activity practiced largely during the winter.

Therein lies the reason for the campaign. American Machine & Foundry Co. is blasting away at the summer doldrums that affect bowling in an attempt to turn bowling's image — as a cold-weather activity — around. Proclaims AMF's Pinspotters, Inc., the company division devoted to this pastime: "Bowling is cool fun!"

To create this mood of January-in-June, the company is pumping a cool three quarters of a million dollars into the current July-August campaign. And, to create a sense of immediacy, air media are getting more than half of the budget.

The biggest share, 30% of the budget, is being channeled into tv. It's showing up on Sunday nights at 8 in a half-sponsorship of the Steve Lawrence-Edyie Gorme summer replacement of the Steve Allen show, normally in that time slot. The show is carried on the full 150-station lineup of the NBC-TV network.

Another hefty proportion, 25%, is allocated to radio. These funds are spread over some 74 stations in 34 leading bowling markets. Spot announcements, all 60-seconds, run from 15 to 50 times weekly on each station.

This summer's heavy campaign is an adjunct to AMF's regular winter-time schedule. This year the company uses tv principally for its first Bowling Stars (SPONSOR 25 January 1953). The intent of the winter campaign (which, incidentally, will go again for 26 weeks this winter) is to reach ahead confirmed bowlers with a twofold sales story: to sell bowlers on the advantages of going to alleys equipped with AMF Pinspotters, and to sell related equipment, which includes company-made bowling balls, bags and shoes.

This first-time summer campaign also has a twofold purpose, explains Frank P. Downey, AMF v.p. and head of the bowling group: "First we want to encourage present bowlers to bowl during the summer, and second, to create new bowlers."

Summer, explains Downey, is an ideal time to seek out new bowlers because children are out of school, people have more leisure and "bowling lanes offer maximum availability."

"Our duality of air media helps us to achieve our two-pronged purpose."

explains Jerry Donovan, bowling group ad manager. "Instead of the pre-selected group we get with Bowling Stars during the winter on tv, we, together with our agency, Cunningham & Walsh, chose the Lawrence-Gorme Show to get exposure to non-bowlers as well. We use our commercial time on tv, both live and filmed, to show bowling as a sport that's carried on in nice surroundings. Viewers can get an idea of the fun and sport involved, even for beginners.

"Radio on the other hand," he continues, "helps in our other objective of filling bowling alleys in off-hours, off-season. We capitalize on radio's immediacy, by tailoring spots to weather conditions. On sultry or rainy days our local spots point out that you can enjoy bowling regardless of the weather.

"We tested radio for other themes this spring," Donovan adds, "and found they worked so well we're using them now. These include things like health, pleasant exercise, sociability and all-family recreation."

In addition AMF, together with its public relations counsel, Barkas and Shalit, is expanding its "Clinics" where it supplies professional instructors to cooperating bowling centers.

AMF hopes that the next 10 years will see a 50% increase in the number of bowlers, from 20 to 30 million. With the combination of steady in-season promotion, plus heavy summer promotions like this, the goal seems modest.

Cigarettes on the air: fall bonanza

➤ The cigarette industry, an air media stalwart, is enjoying a boom in the middle of the present recession

➤ Here's what mounting cigarette sales mean to spot and net radio and tv, and what's coming up this fall

One glance at the chart above will show you what the air media can expect from the cigarette industry this fall: a bonanza. Thus one of the real pillars of the coming season now is just about in place.

The cigarette industry is The largest customer of spot radio, third-largest of spot tv, fifth-largest of network tv, and contributor of about 7% or 8% of network radio volume. Moreover—as the chart also implies—there is a very favorable relationship between cigarette sales and the amount of air media expenditures. In other words, when cigarette sales go up, air expenditures rise as much—or more.

On the important sales side (whence all blessings flow) this is the situation:

Dollar sales among the five major corporates (Brown & Williamson, privately owned, doesn't issue public reports) total $1,768,241,342 for the first half of 1958, as against $1,638,009,789 in 1957. Last year all six companies, including B&W invested approximately $149,000,000 (net time and talent) in the air media. About $89,000,000 went into network tv, $21,000,000 to tv spot. SPONSOR estimates $7,000,000 for network radio, and $32,000,000 for spot radio.

With sales upped by $129,334,553 during this year's first half, plus presumably healthy growth for B&W, it seems logical to expect that some 7% more radio-tv dollars will be budgeted.

Within the air media, the pattern of expenditures probably will retain its classic shape:

- Spot will do the special probing and insistent jabbing—introducing new packages and new brands, putting new pep and new reminders into markets that need it.

- Network will deliver the haymaker. Note from the visualized network schedules on page 34 how the cigarette makers have achieved a "checkerboard" effect. There's no escaping the barrage that will be laid down night after night by brand after brand, especially just before shoppers do much of their "carton buying" (50% of cigarette sales are made in supermarkets and chains).

All of which belies the predictions of wishful cynics some months ago that a health-conscious America would douse its smokes. Quite the contrary.

facturers and their agency folk is that the market has never been more fluid. More people are smoking, more smokers are switching, more brands clamoring for space and time in which to bewitch the switchers.

Though the health factor kicked off the major trend to filters, cigarette men count on acquired taste to keep it there. However as more medical evidence is uncovered you can expect new filters and filter refinements, barrages of claims and counter claims. Some brands feel righteously, if a bit bitterly, they've leaned over backwards avoiding "scare" copy and have therefore fallen short of Kent-size sales increases. L&M thinks it may have "lived modern" too long. Hit Parade, still shunning more alarming reference than "smoke solids" reports sales shot ahead with the find of 10,000 filter traps.

Recession nerve may have contributed to the puffing of sales figures in this year's first six months and package innovations which have been so rampant this season, derive a certain first impetus from pure curiosity.

There's a swing back to soft or "cup" packs showing. Marlboro, which went over big in the flip-top box, now is producing a soft pack in the hope of extending its market. Newport is following suit. Dual Tipped Tareyton hit the shelves in soft pack only. Hit Parade, Viceroy and L&M which offer a choice of packs, suspect the box to be of largely urban and feminine pull. Greater preservative qualities involved in the old cup pack may, conversely reap some airing via radio and tv.

Menthols are "minting" new friends, expecting to claim close to 8% of the market this year. Kool and Salem are jockeying for first position, with newcomers Newport and Oasis moving up.

On the subject of "shake-out" comment ranges from a determined "It's the survival of the fittest—and nosiest" to "You can't kill a cigarette brand—but you may have to stop promoting it." The latter from American Tobacco which continues to produce Sweet Caporals and Melachrino's for sentiments'—and public relations'—sake.

And the skip-week co-sponsor dilemma which was deviling tv nets seems en route to a happy solution with many manufacturers backing alternate shows on behalf of their non-competitive brands.

A SPONSOR survey of the Big Six shows these developments:

In the Hall of Philip Morris: Marlboro, the house leader, aspiring from 4th to 2nd place in filters, mostly by exploitation of its "re-engineering" and sitting pat on its "soft pack." The new "recessed filter" Parliament more than tripling its sales since January. Philip Morris "holding strong" among the regulars. Among menthols, Spud is a loser, but nobody seems to be taking this too much to heart. At first glance, a cut-back in tv/radio budgets might be reflected, but this will hardly hold true after Leo Burnett (an air-minded outfit) joins Philip Morris, Parliament, and PM Corporate accounts with Marlboro mid-September.

Parliament and Philip Morris now remain uncommitted on network. Marlboro will continue its productive "sports program" via "Baseball Game of the Week" and proceed round the calendar through pro football and ice hockey. "To Tell The Truth" has been renewed and "The Jack Paar Show" participation continues on 60 stations. Both radio and tv spotting for Marlboro and Parliament look heavier than last year's quotient, which was sizeable.

Two interesting sidelights: The really cooperative co-sponsorship between Marlboro and Amoco on "Washington Redskins," 41 stations, S & SE. Tie-in ads, promotions, giveaway game schedules, dealer films, etc. . . . Philip Morris Overseas utilizing more broadcast media—i.e. retaped broadcasts of "The Country Music Show" in Australia through JWT Ltd. Melbourne.

At Liggett and Myers: the flagship filter out front. Chesterfield said to be "stabilizing," Oasis mounting in menthols. From the "great white father of network tv," there will emanate 12 weekly commercial minutes opposed to last season's nine. Time assignments being 5½ to L&M, 4½ to Chesterfield, 2 minutes to Oasis. Out of six net TV programs, four are new. "Gunsmoke" and "Fisher-Gobel" are survivals. "The Ed Wynn Show" appears on alternate weeks for Chesterfield, "Behind Closed Doors" alternates for L&M. "Steve Canyon" will run skip-weeks for Chesterfield, "Brains and Brawn" stays in the family with L&M and Oasis. Last season's successful 90-minute spectacular "The Pied Piper" will be repeated 25 September, with all L&M brands plus Velvet Tobacco sharing the credits and splitting the tab. L&M Filter spot tv and radio will be heavy with intermittent spotting for other brands. McCann-Erickson is the agency for Chesterfield, Oasis; Dancer, Fitzgerald & Sample for L&M.

Some Liggett & Myers sidelights: "Gunsmoke" endeared itself here as the best exposure per dollar buy. "Steve Canyon" new Milton Caniff USAF series is regarded as top potential. "Brains and Brawn" forecast as the most daring, and costly, upcoming quiz: Brawn, big name athletes, telecast by remote, pitted against studio Brains. Notable Chesterfield series "Men Of America" will continue.

American Tobacco shows statistics hale and hearty. Pall Mall, which copped 60% of the king-size, non-filter field last year, is shooting for 70% now. Lucky Strike, which ran second in regulars, looks to hold on. Hit Parade moving ahead. High hopes and proportionate budgets are pinned on dual-filter Tareyton which is replacing Filter Tareyton. Venerable cork-tip Herbert T. stays on the stands but off the air. The new brand gets off the ground with full sponsorship of "Batchelor Father" and "The Brothers," participations in Impact (200 CBS radio stations), supplementary prime time spots in all principal markets.

Lucky Strike will take over "The Brothers" time when Jack Benny steps into it and will alternate on "Track-down." Hit Parade seems likely to assume full proprietorship of "Your Hit Parade" in its new 7:30 Friday time slot. And you can light either end of Pall Mall programing and get derring-do, between "Tales of Wells Fargo" and "M Squad." Agencies involved are BBDO, SSC&B and Lawrence Gumbinner.

Brown and Williamson: All seems well. Market strength of brands continue about the same, as do ad budgets. Viceroy, still a hold-out in the high filtration field, rated third in filters last year, presumably by "giving you more of what you changed to a filter for," now is girded with a great new clincher: "The Thinking Man Likes The Filter and The Smoking Man Likes the Taste."

Viceroy takes on two new shows in co-sponsorship with running-mate Kool. "The Texan," a Desilu western starring Rory Calhoun, and "Naked City" based on the Mark Hellinger production, filmed for tv on location in Manhattan, with senior and junior detectives as continuing characters.

Still to be signed is a show to replace "The Line-Up," a product conflict problem. Both brands share quarter sponsorship of NBC Radio's "News On The Hour." Vast spot tv activity will continue a characteristic of Viceroy and Kool schedules. Ted Bates is the agency. Raleigh is picking up 30 minute shows locally, may go into daytime net tv, plus spots, via Keyes, Madden & Jones.

R. J. Reynolds: Renegade from high-filtration, runaway with sales, the highest second quarter on the company's books has been reported. Camel seems to stay up there as "the world's largest selling cigarette," Winston still the out-front filter, Salem sprinting.

Always a notably free-hand on tv and radio spending, Reynolds' opening line-up for the season stands like this. For Camel: the stet co-sponsorship of "Phil Silvers," plus alternate weeks on "The Lawman," a new western with John Russell. For Winston: "I've Got A Secret" in toto, alternate shots on the "Bob Cummings Show." Salem relates its share in "People Are Funny." All three brands alternate with Ballantine on "The New York Yankee Games," WPIX. Camel and Winston participate in all four radio network strips plus spot. All accounts with William Esty.

P. Lorillard: The hero, or the villain, pushing the filter trend, pace-setting its copy-line, cashing in on survey kudos, reports the highest second quarter tally in its 198-year history. For the six months ended June 30, sales were up 111% over a comparable period last year.

Kent's upswing was unmistakable for the best part of that bulge, though Old Gold Straights and mentholed Newport have also shown great gains. Old Gold Spin Filters, newly moved on the market, are aiming ads directly at the 11 million estimated "uncommitted" filter switchers.

Exceedingly aggressive is Lorillard's radio tv line-up. For Kent: "The $64,000 Question" in co-sponsorship with Revlon. "The $64,000 Challenge" with hitch-like commercials for Newport, plus "Person To Person" which may or may not be co-sponsored. For Newport "The Arthur Murray Party" with a hitch-hike for Kent. Old Gold Straights will sponsor "Rough Riders." "The John Daly Newscast" has been signed by P. Lorillard but remains still unassigned by brand. Kent and Newport will reap strong radio support. Lennen & Newell is piloting P. Lorillard's "biggest tv year."

Noteworthy is the leaning of newer brands toward elder shows—mixed-audience variety and quizzes. Old-fangled non-filters are setting store by untried adventures and westerns (zip-pier and cheaper).

Among the filters fighting it out, toe to toe, day by day, and survey by survey, there will be a predominance of live commercials in an attempt to get in the latest word. Non-filters will be more apt to use situation film for their "sell."

How are air media slogans slanting? It looks like the slugfest of "bests" is ending. Among the upcoming crop of catchlines, the most ear-ily responsive would seem to be (a) either back-hands—"No Flat Filtered Out Flavor," "No Filter Feedback," "It's What's Up Front that Counts," "The Man Who Thinks for Himself," or (b) gimmicks—"Smokes Rings Around The Others," "The White Ring Means The Real Thing." For strict straightforwardness, Raleigh's slogan "The Only Great New Filter to Give Valuable Premiums" is in a class by itself and intended to win more than the premium-saving trade.

It will be interesting to watch the way corporates with more than one "finest" filter draw a demarcation to keep their own products out of conflict. Between P. Lorillard's Kents and Old Gold Spin Filters, for instance, there is indicated a difference of Filtration plus Taste—as opposed to Taste versus Filtration. Between American Tobacco's Hit Parade and Dual-Tipped Tareyton, it appears to be a toss-up between "higher" filtration and "balanced" filtration.

Sitting out the scuffle for the time being and generally playing it more softly in filters is "less than half the nicotine" New King Sano, and "most expensive" Benson & Hedges. C. J. LaRoche announces "no immediate air media plans" for United Tobacco's entry. Doyle, Dane, Bernbach has canceled PM's Benson & Hedges extensive FM scheduling, which had been regarded as highly successful by the former agency, Benton & Bowles. These seem to be the only exceptions to the going rule "Latch onto a larger share of air."

So far from being tarred and filtered out of popularity, it would appear that "where there's smoke—there's buyers." Trade sources predict the sale of 423 billion cigarettes this year as opposed to last year's 410 billion. And this may even prove a conservative figure. With air media serving as mouthpiece for both filters and non-filters, the cigarette industry surely has batted and fattened. ▀

The two owner-partners of Family Real Estate, Inc., in New Orleans, are Warren Griffith, Jr., (l) and Louis Riccobono. Six months ago the pair were unemployed; this month they expect to sell more than $2 million worth of home sites. Photo shows remote unit at their development office, from which many of their radio and tv commercials originate

Saturation radio/tv sells real estate

➤ A new real estate company in New Orleans is making record sales by using saturation radio and tv campaigns

➤ This month the firm is using 150 tv spots, 450 radio spots and expects to sell over $2 million in new home sites

The largest single advertiser on station WDSU-TV, New Orleans, this month—buying a five hour “spectacular”—is a company that didn’t exist last March. Nor is WDSU-TV the only station to feel the impact of this fledgling giant. Saturation campaigns of 150 spots are running, as well, on two tv stations and 450 spots on five radio stations in the same market.

Backer of this big air media blast is Family Real Estate, Inc., a company that came into being in April of this year. The founders, Warren Griffith, Jr. and Louis Riccobono, are men cast in a somewhat swashbuckling mold.

Last year, both were salesmen for a New Orleans real estate firm. The measure of their sales ability is indicated by the fact that each had an income last year in the low six-figure bracket. Then they resigned.

By last March both were broke. It is, patently, difficult to explain to normal credit sources how so much money can evaporate in so little time. Banks, relatives, friends are all sufficiently unimaginative to understand such a dilemma, with the result that they had to borrow a couple of bucks a day from a cop on Canal Street to eat lunch and put gas in their car.

They were looking, they said, for the right deal. In April they found it. They persuaded the holder of a tract of land outside New Orleans to let them act as his sales agents. In May they formed Family Real Estate for the purpose.

They began immediately with both tv and radio spots. As sales increased they plowed back money into more air time. On 12 July the firm sponsored a local tv “spectacular”; a presentation of excerpts from a new opera, “Oh, Susanna,” from the Municipal Auditorium.

The net effect, as one observer puts it, “has been to put the New Orleans real estate industry on its ear.” By the time the local spectacular was over, the company had sold more than half-million dollars worth of real estate in the West Lake tract.

The company had grown to nearly 50 salesmen, all of whom were paid cash commissions with each sale. The firm was, during the month of July, second largest user of spot on WDSU-TV, while maintaining a healthy schedule on two other tv stations and various radio stations.

The splash worked so successfully that the firm was in a position to acquire another, and larger, tract of land for homesites. The sales force was increased to 80 salesmen and plans were formulated for the weekend “spectacular.”

The stage for the event was set by Griffith who told the community that “I will sell, on Sunday, August 10, $1,500,000 worth of Lake Front property . . .” Spots began on Monday, 4 August, and built throughout the week, peaking on Sunday. Over the week there was a saturation of 450 radio spots on stations WDSU, WTIX, WNOE, WWL and WSMB. On tv 150 spots were divided between WDSU-TV and WWL-TV.

It culminated with a five-hour show sponsored by the firm. All commercials, as well as a considerable part of the show, came direct from the new tract at West Lake, and featured notables imported for the occasion, including Bob Crosby, Joni James and Jimmie Clanton.

Cost for the 10 August spectacular, with supporting saturation spots on tv and radio, is estimated at about $40,000. Riccobono, the firm’s president, explains that “our confidence in tv and radio is best expressed in our contracting for this expenditure.”

And Griffith adds, “Were it not for the impact of tv and radio we would not dare even contemplate selling one-and-a-half million dollars worth of real estate in one sale.”

And the cop who saw the pair through the lean days? He’s now a salesman for the firm, doing very well too.

August 3, 1958

Dear Henry,

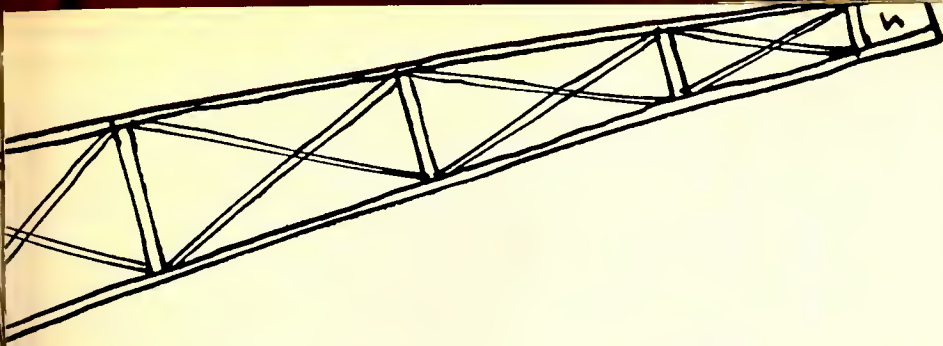

I have just read where you resigned as Chief Time Buyer at Cunningham, Thompson and Osborne. Hank, I'm sorry to hear that. I had been wondering what happened to you, since you left town and went to work in the big city. Time sure does fly.

Seems like only yesterday we were drinking dime beers and selling local radio. That was 1946. What a job it was to sell independent radio then. Networks had it made—we used to say. Real qualitative programs. Come out of Jack Armstrong at six o'clock, go into 15 minutes of pear-shaped news, then into a 15 minute organ show, then to Gang Busters. And remember how we used to wonder how nice it was for Lava to sponsor the show and allow a Lux spot on the break.

We used to question the quality of programing back in those days, especially the soap operas. Used to wonder how any sensible housewife could listen to such inane drivel. But boy, they got ratings, and in those days you just couldn't argue with network ratings.

Then remember when tv came along. Man, it really got rocky. Spots for a buck apiece on our independent jewel. Course, all the radio stations got hit, we weren't the only ones to lose clients. We sure sold a lot of religion in those days—didn't we! Worst thing of all was that people seemed to stop listening. Sets-in-use figures at night went all to hell, and for a couple of years, we really scrambled.

Then there was that day in 1949 the crazy little agency man walked into the station and wanted to buy 50 spots and wanted to run them all on one weekend. We damn near fell out of our chairs! Course we gave him a special rate and helped him with his copy. And who would have thought you could sell houses with radio. And I'll never forget the look on your face

One day not long ago, a radio station manager in a medium-sized Illinois market, musing over the changes radio has undergone in recent years, decided to pinpoint the blame. In the following "letter to a timebuyer," the station manager points a finger at the men who believe that "If you can't sell radio, louse it up so that . . .

"... Nobody gets the business!"

Tuesday morning when he told you that they had sold 18 houses.

You were the one that got him to write us a success letter. That letter, some real great blue sky, and seat-of-our-pants selling, and we began to sell spots instead of programs. Fifty spots a week for $100. By then we had copied the bandstand formula so we had a name for what we were selling.

Right after that, you left for the big city. We rocked along at the station for a couple of years. We got the hang of selling saturation and cumulative audiences and pretty soon we got the finance companies, the furniture stores, and a couple of super markets going real good.

By then, about 1954, we were using a sort of formula thing in programing music, we had shorter newscasts. I sent you some of the ratings we had then, but never heard from you. Man, we had 40's on Hooper, just like the old CBS nite time shows used to have. The boys had figured out show cases for our personalities, we had some good local promotions, but you know, a funny thing, we couldn't sell it nationally. Nobody would believe us. And yet our sets-in-use figures were coming back up too.

Then radio sort of came back in 1955 and 1956 and we couldn't get enough 7 to 9 a.m. time to sell because it was pretty well sold nationally. We got to the place where we were double spotting. You should have heard the local clients squawk. Course, they didn't mind their ad being on the same page with six or eight of their competitors, or being triple spotted in a late movie.

Then in 1957 some funny things began to happen. I say funny, Henry, because our advertisers claimed they were getting good results. It was a real pleasure to sell this kind of radio, cause you could look old man Cohen right in the eye and tell him, "Hell yes, you'll get results. Use enough and use it right, and we'll sell the daylight out of chairs for you." But you remember old man Cohen. He was always impressed by prestige.

Well sir, the other salesmen in town kept chipping away at him, telling him we had no prestige, no dignity, no proper mood and that old line and pretty soon, he started cutting back on radio. From $40,000 a year on two stations, he went to $20,000 and then last year to $10,000. He bought half sponsorship of the local symphony broadcasts last year. They laid a great big egg, and now he is pretty cold on radio. Any radio! Back in newspaper.

I can't understand these local boys. They are too lazy to sell their own product, so they confuse the issue to the place where some of the best local radio accounts are now back in newspaper. The local CBS station made a big pitch on qualitative audiences to the downtown committee. Helluva survey—based on 50 interviews! I'm a son-of-a-gun, if they aren't going to chuck the whole "Shop Downtown" budget into newspaper this year. Said radio was too confusing to buy it.

Well, you had the same thing nationally. Remember those big articles about formula radio, or Top 40 radio or whatever label they hung on it? That started it, they say. And that Culligan, he kept popping off and throwing sand in the air and, boy, that fall the radio budgets that went in the waste baskets!

I remember the big, popular thing to discuss was programing. Not what would sell the product, Henry, but programing. I remember talking to a timebuyer on the phone that fall. He wanted to know, song title by song title, what was on from 7 to 9 that morning. Then he spent 10 minutes telling me why George Shearing was great early morning music. I tried to tell him about our heavy industry, the morning shifts and traffic patterns and the things timebuyers used to want to know, but this timebuyer wanted to discuss a music policy. And you know me, Henry, I just sell it. I have to face these local clients on Monday morning, and I like to hear them say they got results.

Oh yeah, I told him about a local gasoline company that was doing a helluva job on the station, and you know what he told me? "Perhaps their market aim is the teenager. Frankly, with our high test octane, we're attempting to reach the MG crowd, and we think we do that best with George Shearing music to set the mood."

I understand his agency lost that account, and I saw one of the account's big ads in Life just the other nite. Great artwork, five colors, showed a family leaving on a vacation and using this company's Credit Card Plan. Couldn't we sell that idea on radio though Henry?

Anyhow, after that big rumble last fall, and the continuing confusion created by the gray flannel and flat fanny set, our national spot fell way off. Big budgets went back into tv and/or into print.

Too bad, too, because radio was just beginning to make some really great strides. Sure there was some poor radio, but basically it was really coming to life. Some smart operators were giving it some real stature.

I remember that saying you used to have when we were drinking those 10-cent beers—"If you can't sell it, louse it up so nobody gets the business!"

Sure sorry to hear about your resignation, Henry. Guess radio time buying is rough these days. And for you, who used to really go to bat for radio with the account execs and clients, it must be a real bad scene. If things are really tight, maybe we could make room for you on the local staff. Of course, beer is two bits a glass here now!

Kindest regards,
Charlie

Air media: dramatic way to sell movies

➤ “Building anticipation” is the strategy this agency uses on air media to build motion picture audiences

➤ A word of caution: tv, am, fm are all different. Ad campaigns must be planned separately for each Bridgitte Bardot not visual?

“Oh yes, of course,” admits Mort Goodman. Goodman and Rouse, Inc., Los Angeles. “But” he adds with a fine Gallic flair, “she’s more enticing to talk about.”

So Goodman, who handles radio and tv advertising for several major motion picture studios and distributors in Los Angeles, used radio exclusively for BB’s recent endeavor La Parisienne.

Naturally tv is used, but he reserves, for tv only, pictures with a big visual story to tell. Radio is often used alone; tv is always used in addition to the radio schedule.

“What we’re doing,” explains Goodman, figuratively adjusting his beret, “is building anticipation for the product, not giving it away all at once.”

Goodman approaches this challenge of building anticipation in a well-planned fashion. “Tv, am and fm are each a different advertising medium,” he says, “and to get the most out of them, advertising must be planned separately for each.”

For tv: Surveys in the peak days of the movies showed that trailers on the screen produced a minimum 50% advertising benefit, their influence often determining the salability of many pictures. “But it’s no longer possible to assume that every trailer will get the habit-pattern exposure it once did,” he adds. “Now you design a selective trailer, utilizing the potentially greater audience, but taking into account the interests, tastes, incomes and age groups you’re speaking too.”

For fm: This is used whenever there might be interest in a picture

“among a discriminating audience.” A word of caution from Bernice (Bunny) Walker, G&R media director: “Don’t steal from the am budget to accommodate fm. The reasons for reaching the fm audience are as distinct as the reasons for using radio for one impact and penetration, tv for another.”

On radio, Goodman uses 30’s and 60’s providing descriptive copy of the film, together with exhibitors and dates. On tv he uses a strong film clip, together with a slide listing the dates and theaters showing the film to make a 20-second spot. A 60 permits the use of several clips.

When budget permits, he uses a “saturation” schedule for full impact. Such was the case with The Vikings in June. The budget was $10,000. Radio spots, on six stations, began 10 days before, but ended with the opening. Four tv stations began five days before the 20 June opening, ran through 21 June. And, as a topper, tv station KTLA gave live coverage to both the Friday evening and Saturday “kiddie” premieres.

To take advantage of the impact created, the film was first-run for two weeks only, then rushed into 14 community theaters and drive-ins. In two weeks, reported Variety, “it hit a smash $135,000 or better. . . .”

“There is no more perishable merchandise than a motion picture,” Goodman says. But he and his newly-acquired partner, Art Rouse, hold that any product introduction, short-term campaign or local promotion, should be included in the same category.

“The dramatic presentation, with the same market-building through anticipation, should be applied to other things as well,” they believe. This philosophy is practiced with their real estate, home appliance and industrial accounts.

“Take an automobile,” Goodman says. “Because it’s made of steel and chrome it isn’t looked upon as a perishable, especially during its introduction. It comes in big all right; but not hard enough or fast enough. A change in advertising concept would help produce a healthy change in sales.”

“But regardless of the product,” Goodman adds, “it’s imperative to strengthen the impact by creating a separate image for every medium used.

“You can’t,” he adds, “merely re-tool a tv commercial for radio or vice-versa.”

Slight rise seen in daytime spot rates

➤ Latest Katz Agency survey predicts nighttime spot radio rate level will remain about the same this year

➤ Four-network total of sponsored hours for this week at 88 hours, compared to 88.1 hours for week ending 18 July

Spot radio trends will remain about the same during the coming year—with just a nominal increase predicted in daytime rates, and practically no change in nighttime.

So says the Katz Agency, in its latest survey of spot rate trends.

One emerging trend in radio, according to Daniel Denenholz, v.p. in charge of research-promotion at Katz, provides for an increase in the number of announcements per week covered by package plans.

This radio index of stations represented by Katz, is based on rates as of 1 January of each year.

Here is the comparison of rate trends in spot radio for the past three years:

YEARS	DAYTIME BASE RATES	NIGHTTIME BASE RATES
1957 over 1956	+1.8%	—5.2%
1958 over 1957	+3.2%	—0.5%

As for network buys, the four-web total of sponsored hours for the week ending 15 August is 88 hours. This compares with 88.1 hours for the week ending 18 July.

Here are some of the highlights:

ABC: Carling Brew, Standard Oil and Western Airlines will sponsor the All Star Football Game; Sterling Drug has bought 15 minutes of news and sportscasts. Outgoing clients include Bristol-Myers and Philco.

CBS: American Tobacco is in for 55 minutes, Congoleum Nairn for 100 minutes in various shows and Miles Labs, for 25 minutes of newscasts. American Motors, Hearst and Evinrude are out.

MBS: Readers Digest, for 50 minutes and General Foods for 15 30-second announcements, are in; Dumas Milner and Nestle Co. are out.

NBC: New clients include General Foods, RCA and Wildroot. Carling Brew, Dow Chemical and Evinrude are out.

Note: The list of network clients will not appear in this issue.

How does a station become top-rated

As competition between stations becomes stiffer, three station men review the factors that help make a station top-rated in its market.

Douglas Holcomb, director of promotion & advertising, WGBI-WDAU-TV, Scranton, Pa.

"Primarily it is network shows"

Every promotion director is employed by the "top station" in his market. If you don't believe that ask him.

And he will prove his station is tops—tops in something anyway. Tops in quarter-hour merchandising . . . or tops in unsold quarters. But certainly tops in something.

In many markets, nevertheless, there is a particular station which is tops and the promotion director of this station is able to prove it with a few indisputable figures from recognized rating services. Usually he points out that his station has more quarter-hour leads than all the other stations combined and has the largest share-of-audience from sign-on to sign-off.

Such a station is CBS affiliate WDAU-TV of Scranton-Wilkes Barre. It serves a million and a half people in the 19 counties in northeastern Pennsylvania, and has the figures to prove it. Why is WDAU-TV the top station in the market? The promotion department has had something to do with it. But a promotion department must have something to promote and WDAU-TV offers that "something more" which makes one station rate higher than another.

What is something more?

Primarily it is the network shows. I firmly believe CBS offers the best shows and provides greater promotion opportunities than its competitors. But not every CBS station enjoys WDAU-

TV's dominant position so this cannot be entirely it.

Is it syndicated half-hour shows?

These are important and I like to confer with other departments before such shows are scheduled. Obviously, however, there are only a limited number of these syndicated shows available and promotion efforts tend to be stereotyped with equal opportunities available to all stations in the market.

Is it live shows?

This is an extremely important area.

A station must have its own live identity rather than become a "celluloid fill between network offerings". It provides an opportunity for varied programs appealing to every age group. WDAU-TV starts the days with its own live "morning show" followed with Romper Room for the children and ends the afternoon with Bingo at Home. But such shows are offered by many stations which do not dominate the market.

Is this "something more" found in film features?

WDAU-TV has been offering about 20 top film features per week with a daily Million Dollar Movie and Late Late Show. But many stations featuring the same pictures wind up far back on the rating race despite stereotyped promotion.

The thing that makes WDAU-TV different is the "something more" it offers its community in the field of news and public affairs programing. WDAU-TV maintains an independent news organization with a full complement of photographers. It subscribes to both AP and UPI. It is served by CBS Newsfilm and Western Union. These are basic services available to every station, of course.

In my opinion, it is the use of these services for public service that makes WDAU-TV different and provides the "something more." Public Service programing builds the station's prestige position. With these we serve the 52 communities in our area—each with a population of over 5000 people.

When Scranton and Wilkes Barre labor leaders were testifying before the McClellan Committee WDAU-TV was on hand and pre-empted commercial programs to bring 17,000 feet of sound film to its viewers on a same-day basis. Associated Press columnist Mercer commented that it was "the most complete coverage of a national news story ever achieved by a local station."

This then is the "something more" which makes WDAU-TV different. It is my job to make known to all 52 communities that WDAU-TV service is available to them and to properly exploit it.

Joel Chaseman, program manager, WJZ-TV, Westinghouse Broadcasting Co., Baltimore

"Public wants more than entertainment"

We don't think it is possible to give studied reasons as to why WJZ-TV is the No. 1 station in Baltimore. I suppose it is rather the accumulation of many factors. Most important broad principle, however, is our attempt, with some success, to understand and calculate the needs and appetites and desires of the public. The people of Baltimore want to be entertained and we are, in part, an entertainment medium and so we have been able to present to them not only the outstanding programs of the ABC Network, but also some of the finest film productions of Hollywood that have been produced over a 30 year period. To this we have added some important and novel local live programing such as Buddy Deane, Baltimore Close-Up, Your Romance and others.

But today the public also wants something more from television than just entertainment. They want to be informed, and at times they want to be educated. This is dictated by the increased tempo of newscasts during in a market?

the Baltimore closeup and throughout the day. The news presented includes not only reports from Keith McBee covering the Near East crisis and Lebanon, but also minute by minute reports from Washington through our Westinghouse Broadcasting Co. Washington News Bureau and an aggressive job of varying local news. In addition, we have had several opportunities to present public affairs programming of a spectacular type and to associate ourselves in a very close way with such community projects as Charles Center and others.

Two other points: We believe you have to tell the public what we are doing and therefore we have promoted our station and its schedule.

Secondly, although we don't always succeed, we recognize the indisputable nature of showmanship in every presentation whether it be a film show or news program and public service program or even a promotion effort. We are competing for the attention of the public and the competition is tough so we better be good or there'll be no one looking no matter how noble or pioneering our programming efforts are.

"Heavy promotion of shows"

With its first audience rating, only six weeks after going on the air, WRAL-TV in Raleigh captured audience dominance, a position it has since maintained. As there were two stations in the area already well established, you may ask just how was this accomplished. Listed below are the reasons, not necessarily in order of importance, we believe to be responsible for making WRAL television the most viewed station in the Raleigh-Durham area.

2. Heavy promotion of network and local shows by:

- A. On-the-air announcements
- B. 10 billboards
- C. Bus cards in the two leading cities
- D. Direct mail.
- E. Radio spot announcements.
- F. Newspapers.
- G. Guided tours.

3. WRAL television offers less duplication of coverage. In certain areas in our coverage radius viewers have at least three stations from which they may view a rival network's programming.

4. Superior news and sports coverage. Our geographical advantage of being located in the capital city where the majority of news breaks in the state occur is a big factor in our audience dominance. Experienced reporters are headed by an editor with wide news gathering background. Too, Raleigh is often called the "Sports Capital of the South." with three large universities boasting nationally known athletic teams located within thirty miles. Ray Reeve, the "Dean" of southern sportscasters, has been heard for nearly twenty years on sports networks of up to 50 radio stations. He brought to WRAL television a ready made sports audience.

5. Superlative equipment — competent personnel: Confidence in the station was created early by a minimum of lost time due to equipment failure. The station is equipped throughout with new General Electric equipment. Two of the south's largest studios are equipped with seven cameras, a rear screen projector and three 70 circuit lighting boards. The $100,000 remote unit is equipped for four cameras. The ampex video tape recorder is the first in operation in North Carolina. The experienced personnel, drawn from all parts of the country enjoy the finest in equipment.

6. Close liaison with set dealers and service technicians: Several months after the FCC issued our CP, all dealers and technicians in the area were advised of our target date, December 15, 1956. We made it, to the minute.

7. Imagination in local programming: Local programs have a fresh approach, with attractive formats and new ideas. All programming is designed, not only for entertainment, but to give local and regional service.

Time's getting short for fall starting dates and syndicators with new first-run products aren't going to wait much longer for those regional prospects.

The indications were this week, according to a FILM-SCOPE cross-check, that syndicators will in a couple weeks be making such product available for market-by-market selling.

If a series is to make a 1 October starting date in as many markets as possible, the syndicators will have to open the local sluices mighty soon.

Dancer-Fitzgerald-Sample is currently in negotiation for a good time slot in New York for L&M. The show: Mackenzie's Raiders.

It'll be a single market buy for L&M, not the regional deal rumored.

Amoco, via Joseph Katz, made its first syndication buy this week.

The oil company will sponsor the 15-minute Frank Leahy Show in 19 Northeast markets.

A previous regional buy was for the eastern half of Person-to-Person. Since then the company has relied on spot announcements.

Ronzoni, through Emil Mogul, is on the verge of signing its next regional syndication buy.

The new series is to replace Honeymooners, which runs out this fall. Leading contender: MCA's first-run off-network series, If You Had a Million.

MCA made its sixth Paramount library sale this week, this one outside of the territorial U.S.

The station: KUAM-TV, Agana, Guam. The buy is apparently not for the full package, but on a picture-to-picture basis.

Two more sales are due to be announced this week.

Independent KTNT-TV, Tacoma, is scheduling what amounts to a local 90-minute drama series this fall.

A regional detergent, Deep Cleaner, has bought total sponsorship of the station's Screen Gems' Playhouse 90 re-runs, and will run the eight as Best of Playhouse 90 dramas on a once-a-month basis. (8:30-10 p.m.)

Deep Cleaner, through Pacific National Advertising, will promote the shows as a series of specials.

Burnett media chief Len Matthews this week said that there was no foundation whatever for the report that the agency was encountering much opposition from stations to the idea of granting "contributions" for film shows that Kellogg will be sponsoring.

Noted Matthews: "Some stations that originally declined to make special discounts for the programs Kellogg delivered had had their managers in here pitching for the business. Only in one remote market have we had a definite turndown."

These special discounts for delivered Kellogg film series are: two programs, 20%; three programs, 25% and four programs, 30%.

The four shows: Huckleberry Hound, Superman, Bill Hickok, Woody Woodpecker.

One of the biggest revolutions in food processing may be over the horizon.

It's irradiated foods. Radiation cuts down the decay process so that foods can be stored without refrigeration.

The potential effect on the frozen food business from this development is another example of how modern technology is setting marketing on its ear.

According to reports, irradiated foods are still in the experimental stage with some answers still to be found.

Growing consumption of iced tea has given a lift to the powdered variety.

Tip-off that powdered (instant) tea may be a comer is Lipton's introduction of its own brand this summer. Lipton, kingpin of the tea business, is testing it in four markets.

Powdered tea is not new. Nestle, with its Nestea, and Standard Brands, with its Tender Leaf name, have been marketing "instant" teas for about 10 years. Nestea, which has been recording summer sales hikes steadily, went national two years ago, is being plugged this summer on the Gale Storm Show, MBS, spot radio and tv, three shelter magazines and two store books.

Seeman Bros., which distributes regionally under the White Rose banner, also introduced a powdered tea this summer. The firm already has on the market a White Rose liquid tea concentrate.

Admen regard tea marketing as tricky.

One reason is the lack of figures on how it's used, particularly as regards iced tea. A Tea Council study, done some years ago, reported that about 35% of all tea is consumed in the iced form.

Iced tea consumption varies considerably by regions. It's relatively low in the north, high in the south. On top of this, overall tea consumption is highest in the east, lowest in the west. Men appear to have a higher preference for iced tea than women. As for seasonal variations affecting iced tea consumption, humidity as well as temperature seem to affect its use.

Some revealing figures on total tea consumption were reported in Pulse's study of eating habits in 26 metropolitan areas last August. Percent of people drinking tea is low in the morning, rises to about one out of 10 for lunch, hits a peak for dinner. During the week nearly 24% of those interviewed reported drinking tea at dinner, a higher percentage than coffee drinkers.

New products or product changes have been a basic feature of marketing during the 1950's, but the recession has put added pressure on manufacturers to come up with profitable ideas.

Here are three key trends to watch, according to one experienced adman.

- Germicidal additives to laundry, dishwashing and toilet products.
- The small, economical car.
- Dietetic (non-fattening) foods.

The latter category is now over the hump so far as chains are concerned. Turnover has raised the profit-per-foot to competitive levels. Low calorie salad dressings are making good headway and a line of non-fattening soups is on the verge of a debut.

2) Original members of the famous Chicago-based agency: Leo Burnett; Strother Cary; Mary Keating (Burnett's secretary); and DeWitt O'Kieffe.

3) Twelve members of the firm have been with Burnett for 20 years; 15 people for 15 years; 30 for 10 years, and about 200 for five years.

Highlights of the celebration:

• Men members of the 5-, 10-, 15- and 20-year clubs reported in wearing their "Burnett ties"—navy blue, printed with the Burnett logo (reaching for the stars). Members of the 10-year club are awarded the star reacher's cuff links in gold. Five-year and over women employees are given "Burnett Apple" earrings, also in gold, as are wives of the over 10-year club members.

• At the various luncheons celebrating the anniversary, each of the five-year and over members were presented with wallets containing 23 new dollar bills. Burnett's waiting room was filled with flowers sent by reps and other Michigan Avenue well-wishers.

This is the kind of hold our station has on people

There are two sides to figures—"how many?" and "how much?" Their relationship depends on viewer loyalty.

Well, what is loyalty—the impulse, for example, that keeps sets tuned to Channel 7 in the 747,640 TV homes of 41 flourishing counties in 3 states? Its cause is allegiance to the station image projected by our thoughtful programming—by our many, valued service features—by little things of big import, like no triple-spot aggravations. Its evidence lies in our steady predominance in mail counts, ratings and constant communication. Here, that loyalty can transfer itself to you.

So sponsors find that in the WHIO-TV marketplace "how much?" is just about "how many?" . . . George P. Hollingbery can tell you more from another set of realistic figures—our rate card.

Rarely indeed does one man alone determine when and where to place radio or TV business. That's why it makes sense to reach every decision maker possible with your message because every voice that helps to finalize a sale should know your story.

It's the chief reason your advertising will do so well in SPONSOR. SPONSOR reaches almost everybody who is anybody in air. All the timebuyers, of course, but more decision makers, too, at every level (in both the agency/advertiser category) than any other broadcast publication.

Proof?

Fair enough!

SPONSOR is the only broadcast publication that offers a complete circulation breakdown BY JOB CLASSIFICATIONS—listing the exact number of subscribers (with their names and titles) at every management level. We'll be happy to show it to you at your convenience and prove beyond doubt that SPONSOR reaches more teams that buy time than any other book in the field.

Best-selling weekly magazine in America

How TV Guide's 16 rating can insure a high rating for your show

Across the nation, one TV family in six reads TV Guide magazine (circulation base $6\frac{1}{2}$ million as of October 4). In itself, that is the equivalent of a 16 rating.

Consistent advertising of your program in TV Guide magazine is your best insurance of both high ratings and high sponsor identification. For TV Guide readers look at the magazine before they turn on their set. Each reader, on the average, reads it five times each day.

You get not just one but many chances to build the interest of millions of families in your show and your stars.

With TV Guide's 50 regional editions, you can mesh your advertising perfectly with your station lineup, without waste circulation.

TV Guide is the national watchword. And—note this well—it is as valuable for advertising your products as your programs.

TV STATIONS

Another station to enter into expanded news services, is WFIL & WFIL-TV, Philadelphia, with its introduction of the "News Helicopter."

The 'copter will be used for speeding the stations' reporters and newsreel cameramen to the scene of the news, for an on-the-spot report.

WHYN-TV, Springfield-Holyoke, thinks it has the answer to why bingo programs get a low rating.

The answer: Folks who play bingo do not answer the telephone while the game is on the air, and in many cases take the phone off the hook.

Along with a Trendex and ARB coincidental, WHYN-TV conducted its own survey, and were only able to complete 54.8% of the calls. Of the rest of the attempted calls, 33.2% didn't answer.

Los Angeles' KTTV's exclusive coverage of the finals of the Miss Universe Beauty Pageant kayoed all opposition with a 48 rating at 11:00 p.m. and a 80.8 share of audience.

The special ARB survey has made at the request of Anderson and McConnell Advertising, agency for Max Factor, one of the sponsors of the series.

WTVP, Decatur, Ga., threw a huge party at Chicago's Yacht Club for the town's leading timebuyers and other media people.

Purpose: To celebrate the station's new ownership. This group includes: George Bolas, media director at Tatham-Laird, Decatur and the Swanson Brothers of Swanson Frozen Foods (an account handled at Tatham-Laird).

Tv programing notes:

• Klor-TV, Provo, Utah, is first to purchase the videotape version of WGN's Ding Dong School as a week-day strip for a 52-week series. Klor-TV is a new independent station airing about 1 October, in full color.

• KSTP-TV, Minneapolis-St. Paul, made tv history when it received, then broadcast live, the first tv pix from the edge of outer space.

Following the launching of a Navy Stratolab balloon flight, pictures were shown that were taken via a cigar box sized, 2½ ton tv camera valued at $6,000 inside the balloon. The shots were on the air 1½ hours after launching.

• Stereophonic sound experiments are still underway in Chicago, the latest via WBBM-FM and WBBM-TV. Broadcasting Jazz in the Round in full-range three-dimensional sound, these joint forces stereo'd the show as it was being produced.

Tv promotions re the Lawrence Welk personal appearance tour:

• WBKB-TV, Chicago, participating in the 11-city personal appearance tour of ABC's Lawrence Welk Show, presented a 2½ hour variety concert in Chicago's Amphitheater. The Welk's group was kicked off with a motorcade escorting the entourage into town.

LOCAL RATE

Storz established two general classifications of accounts — retail and product — with retail accounts receiving the local rate and product-accounts the national.

In the Storz list of "national rate" accounts are: ales, beers and wines, automotive dealer associations, and regional or zone offices of automotive manufacturers, distributors and wholesalers of national products and appliances, food brokers, drug jobbers, and other product brokers, manufacturers representatives, all petroleum products, all publishers' advertising, and transportation companies operating in interstate commerce.

Accounts entitled to the "local rate" are soft drink franchised bottlers, finance companies, banks, and retail clothing and grocery chain stores (when advertising said stores). Additionally, Storz set up certain qualifications and conditions for advertisers to be given the local rate. These included rules governing distribution, continuity, agency, billings, contracts, etc.

Along Madison Avenue, the Storz regulations have been received enthusiastically as a sound and a constructive step in the right direction. Opinion differs, however, as to whether the Storz formulas apply equally well to other stations in other markets.

Adam Young, one of the two rep firms representing Storz, feels that all stations will not establish the same account groups but that this isn't important. What is important, says Adam Young, is that stations set up two groups of accounts — local and national — and see to it that "all accounts in the same group pay the same rate."

On the other hand, some veteran reps such as Arthur McCoy, exec. v.p. at John Blair & Co., feel that while the "account group system" represents a considerable improvement over most current station practices, the eventual solution for major stations lies in establishing a single rate for everybody.

At present 13 out of 40 stations represented by Blair have a single rate, and the number is increasing steadily. Blair reports that every station which has established a single rate has enjoyed healthy business increases.

A third solution, suggested by some agency media men, accustomed to working with newspapers as well as broadcast media, is merely a clear-cut definition of a "retail rate." (For a discussion of these three suggestions, see box.)

One aspect of the current rate confusion which is receiving considerable speculation in agency and rep circles involves a point of law. Many agencies use the standard 4A contract forms which contain a "most favored nation" clause. Under it, an advertiser is entitled to a refund or rebate if a station grants a lower rate for "like broadcast."

Checking up on rumors that agencies were preparing to sue stations granting regional rates, SPONSOR found no evidence of impending legal actions. But agency men did say they were studying the 4A contract carefully, and would take steps to protect their rights if and when they found evidence of violations.

Another important consideration concerns the Robinson-Patman Act. Some agencies and reps believe that many local rate practices by individual stations are in direct violation of Robinson-Patman provisions (which forbid discrimination), and have asked their legal counsel for opinions on this phase of the problem.

Finally, industry groups and stations are concerned over possible charges of collusion, and anti-trust violation if, in clearing up the local rate confusion, stations try to act together to work out satisfactory solutions.

General opinion seems to be that the whole problem must rest finally with the individual station owner. His alone is the responsibility for analyzing his rate policy, modernizing it if necessary, and sticking to it in the face of any attacks.

Meanwhile, there's little doubt that the present rate situation is bewildering and irritating to many advertisers and agencies. And there's no question that prestige is at stake.

"Show me a station that doesn't have a clearcut policy about local rates," says a topnotch agency time-buyer, "and I'll show you a station that can be had."

"National tv and radio spot together make up a three-quarter of a billion dollar business," complains a v.p. of a top-10 agency, "but many stations, with their goofy ideas about local rates, are treating it like a bargain basement operation."

For SPONSOR's editorial position on this difficult and troubling problem, see page 86.

This is the story of how a radio station increased its national spot business from $500 a month to $20,000 in a little over a year. Of how it accomplished this feat in the toughest market in the world—New York. Of how—broadcasting from Newark, New Jersey—it achieved this remarkable growth in the shadow of eight 50 KW facilities and in an advertising climate that traditionally considered North Jersey not as a separate market at all but rather a suburb of Madison Avenue.

The name of the station is WVNJ.

The yarn reads like something out of Horatio Alger but we feel keenly it is worth the study of every station manager in America who is convinced, like WVNJ was, that it has something to offer national spot.

It's a history of an idea—a bright new idea in programming, for one. But in a deeper sense, it's a story of faith in advertising. Not just lip service faith handed a sponsor—but an unshakeable belief that advertising was an essential vitamin of business growth for itself as well. WVNJ backed that belief with the best tangible evidence we know—money. Here's what happened when—they bought what they sold an idea was born...

One day late in 1956 WVNJ peered into its mirror on the wall and saw with disheartening clarity that it was not—definitely not—the fairest station of them all. More deflating than that, it realized it was not even considered a contender.

National spot business was booming but nowhere near its doors. Other metropolitan New York stations were flexing their Pulse and Nielsen muscles but WVNJ's ratings were invisible to the naked eye. If ever a man had reason to slit his antenna—this was it. Today—just 15 months later—WVNJ's rate has gone from $8.50 per commercial minute (which it could barely sell) to $22.50 per spot—with a list of national and regional sponsors anxious to get on. Twice in the last 4 months it has had to declare a moratorium on new business. How was this done? first — an idea was born.

how to get it off the ground?

It was a great idea. Time has proved that beyond argument. The rise of WVNJ may well be the outstanding radio success story of the year.

But when Ivon B. Newman, general manager of the station, first conceived the notion of spinning only Great Albums of Music from sign on to sign off—a conservative estimate would have given him as much chance of success as filling an inside straight.

No one had ever tried playing just Great Albums of Music before. This new programming was to have no chit-chat—no personalities—no top 40 stuff—no rock-n-roll—no nothing but just Great Albums of popular music. Complete albums of Broadway shows past and present—albums of Hollywood musicals—albums of great singing stars, albums of great orchestra leaders, of great instrumentalists—album after album of the world's most popular music and entertainers from sign on to sign off 18 hours a day. The only "talk" was to be news and commercials.

It meant scrapping all that existed on the station—which had been a consistent money maker—to explore something utterly new which might not produce national business at all and perhaps lose the local business that was there to the bargain.

Convinced, however, that it had something it could sell, WVNJ went ahead. The rest is history of a sort.

To the interested station manager or its agency—here are some of the methods and ideas that were employed to get the concept off the ground and into the black in record time.

first—how to build an audience

Sounds easy—or does it—and just where does one begin? Advertising could be no ordinary “tune-in” campaign. One had to awaken a latent want—the need and the benefits of Great Albums of Music.

What made it even tougher was that the very nature of the programming (a melodic music line over and above trick arrangements) predicated a preponderance of adult listeners. And if there is one factor common to all adults it is the development of habits that become increasingly more fixed and more difficult to change.

Before it went all out, WVNJ did a little testing on its own. A month's schedule was created and printed. Listeners were urged to write in for a free program guide listing the time and day their favorite Great Albums of Music would be played.

The idea took. That was important to know. If the station's own listeners responded—others would, too. It was now a matter of evoking the proper desire in the many millions of families in the area.

A newspaper campaign was created with “Great Albums of Music” offered as a better way of life. It was a very basic concept outlining the multitude of benefits that music had to give—the memories it could revive—the hours it could freshen—the feeling of enrichment that lay always in its train.

“Make it part of your day” was the campaign theme. The theme was integrated in every bit of promotion done for the station. It was used on the station itself both as a slogan and as a transcribed jingle. Posters were made and pasted on the trucks of the Newark News reaching all of North and Central Jersey. Ads were placed in many Jersey papers and in the New York Mirror. The Monthly Program Guide carried the theme. Letterheads and envelopes were redesigned to further the message. Reprints of the ads were utilized as envelope stuffers. Nothing was overlooked. Even the station's calling cards helped to sell the story.

Reprints of this campaign are available to any agency or station, WVNJ tells us. It is worth study for 2 reasons. First because it was chosen by the League of Advertising Agencies as the outstanding newspaper campaign created in 1957 by any of its agency members in America. But more important—because of its results. They can be seen on the following page.

Here are the results only one year later. They are in factual form. We just don't know how to make them more dramatic.

The latest Pulse Report taken in Essex County (Jan.-Feb.-Mar.) reveals that WVNJ has more total audience in this area than any radio station in New York City or New Jersey. It is by far the number 1 voice in this vital market. And this from nowhere just 12 short months ago.

Of the four New Jersey Radio Stations, WVNJ ranks first in audience in 27 out of 34 rated periods from 7 A.M. till midnight. It is tied for first in 3 more.

The night record is even more amazing. In every rated period from 6 P.M. to 11:30 P.M. (Monday through Saturday) WVNJ has higher ratings in Essex County than any radio station in the entire greater New York area.

One thing more.

The record should highlight one thing more: WVNJ never waited for the record at all. Long before it ever had a rating to sell it had formulated a budget for the trade and went full speed ahead.

Convinced that one did not have to be top station in a market to do business, WVNJ set several broad objectives for the trade campaign.

1. Decision makers had to be informed of WVNJ's new concept in programming. 2. They had to be made aware of mounting consumer interest. 3. Shown the type of consumer the station attracted. 4. Told how economical it was on a cost per thousand basis.

Believing in the advertising fundamentals it preached (that continuity, impact and the forces of pre-selling could do as good a job for itself as for its sponsors) WVNJ once again bought what it sold and underwrote a consistent full page campaign in broadcast media. An initial budget of about $20,000 was allocated for the space—divided among the 3 big books in the field.

Incidentally—if further indication of faith were needed—this budget represented better than 3 times WVNJ's total national spot business of the year before.

Here again—every effort was made to get as much integration and mileage as possible out of the program. The station's national representatives, Broadcast Time Sales, left transistor radios with time buyers, advertising managers, account executives, etc., urging them to listen to WVNJ—the only voice of its kind in the country. Entire programs were taped and sent to agencies and advertisers all over America. Reprints of the trade ads—some blown up to almost 4 ft. in height—went out in a steady stream. Every angle of publicity, too, was followed thru on a full time basis.

Within 60 days tangible evidence of progress could be seen. Within 6 months national spot business had sky-rocketed to 10 times its 1956 levels. The station was on its way.

Dear Mr. Glenn:

It is difficult to write a letter such as this without making it read like an advertisement. And the fact that you have chosen us for a success story treatment makes whatever I say doubly suspect. But I think you ought to know how I feel about your book and that the opinions I hold were with me long before we ever bought a single line.

SPONSOR is the only book in the trade I actually read from cover to cover. I've been doing that for over 10 years. I read it because I find it interesting, informative and ably written.

We had never used it as an advertising medium until 1957. That's the first time we took a long look at it as an investment. We took a look at other books, too. We listened to your story and to everybody else's. Frankly, tho the others did not seem as powerful, we decided we needed massive penetration so we bought them all.

But during the course of the year some interesting facts came to light. In our efforts to attain national business we talked to a great many people, of course, and we discovered that most agency men seemed to prefer SPONSOR. So we probed this further and found that every independent survey proved SPONSOR reached more readers in the agency/advertiser category than any other broadcast publication. This is the man we want most to meet.

Still further analysis showed that the editorial concept of SPONSOR, pinpointed to the basic interests of decision makers, reached them in a more favorable climate and that the body of text itself - almost 100% slanted for their use - gave our ads themselves a much better chance of being seen.

What sold us most was your circulation statement showing the job breakdown of subscribers, proving that you deliver the largest, unduplicated group of decision makers in the industry.

FOR THESE REASONS IN 1958-59 WVNU HAS ALLOCATED TWICE AS MUCH SPACE IN SPONSOR AS IN ANY OTHER PUBLICATION.

Kindest personal regards,

Cordially yours,

Ivon B. Newman
General Manager

it tastes swell...

Today sponsors are feeding WVNJ more national spot business per month than it received in the past 3 years combined.

From practically nothing ($500) it went to almost $20,000 a month in just a little over a year. And it's still growing.

A more intensive campaign is on for '58, with goals set for almost double '57. And at the pace the station is climbing, this double estimate may even prove conservative.

It is an indication of what can be done by any independent station—even in the toughest market like New York—with an idea and the creative energy to carry it through.

The House subcommittee which investigated weight reducing preparations made it perfectly plain what it thought about tv and radio stations and publications which carried the copy of an advertiser slapped with an FTC cease-and-desist order.

The subcommittee's opinion, as contained in a report which tore the FTC apart: There ought to be a law to prevent these media from doing such a thing.

Among the highlights of the report were these:

- A recommendation that information about postoffice mail fraud orders and FTC false ad cease-and-desist orders aimed at a single advertiser be passed on to all media and all advertisers of the same product. Thereafter the same type of advertising could not be carried by media or ordered by other advertisers.
- A recommendation that jurisdiction over advertising foods and drugs be moved from the FTC to the Food and Drug Administration. And that whereas it is now necessary to prove advertising false, advertisers should be required to prove the truth of their statements.
- A blast at the FTC for bungling its case against Ayds and for thereafter using the adverse court decision to duck its responsibility for cracking down on false advertising of similar products. Also for taking so much time to act on false advertising complaints.

The report quoted FTC testimony to the effect that "it takes a person who is really gullible to believe many of these ads and commented: If this is the FTC's attitude then the public is at the mercy of every unscrupulous huckster."

To the subcommittee, said the report, this sounded more like "indifference and apathy . . . total rejection of the will of Congress," plus evidence of a "record of incredible delay and apathy."

Despite the fact that Congressional adjournment was delayed at least until 16 August and perhaps for a week or more beyond, two broadcasting measures appeared to be in some danger.

The Potter resolution, calling for a commission to probe the way the military is using the frequencies assigned to it, seemed swept under the rug. The House Commerce Committee capitulating to the White House, added a probe of frequency use by commercial radio and tv. Alarmed, the broadcasting industry swung its tremendous weight and apparently lobbied the resolution to death.

This caused considerable anguish to some FCC commissioners including chairman Doerfer. Doerfer felt that the probe might turn up waste of valuable spectrum space by the military and, in any event, might be a club to turn aside military pressure for channels now devoted to tv.

Doerfer fears that broadcasters, in their trepidation re a probe of their own holdings and anxieties to preserve the status quo, might have dug a grave for themselves.

The President could, on his own authority, order tv channels 2 through 6 (or any others) turned over to defense uses without explanation or by-your-leave.

Another measure put in grave doubt merely by the factor of delay is the bill to force a code of ethics on the FCC. There was no explanation as to why its principle exponent, Rep Oren Harris, wasn't pushing the bill to the floor of the House.

Harris had promised through the scandalous FCC hearings which his Legislative Oversight Subcommittee held, to get such a bill passed this year. His subcommittee reported it, but at the start of this week the House Commerce Committee, of which Harris is also chairman, had done nothing.

A big asset for client entertaining these days seems to be a yacht.

The fact that the account supervisor on a $20-million piece of business has one makes smooth sailing for the agency; the ad manager just loves that boat.

CBS TV has a nut of $250,000 to work off on the Wizard of Oz and thus wants to stage a second showing this season.

So far the network hasn't had any bites. It's got a like amount left on the cuff for the fall-scheduled Wonderful Town.

Tv station managements are taking a harder look at their network income because of the effect it's having on their profit and loss statements.

The concern stems from the suspicion that a lot of potential spot money is being siphoned off into network shows via new selling strategies.

A comment you hear more and more along Madison Avenue is that agencies' treatment of the air media has become encrusted with formula thinking.

Among the credos symptomatic of this way of life: (1) Follow the leader, (2) buy everything by the numbers so that you're always in a defensible position with the client, (3) don't stick your neck out by suggesting the different or the untried, and (4) hold on to the old cliches in trying to solve a problem.

As a past master for milking a show for all it's worth there's none to compare with P&G.

The soap giant's sponsorship of the nighttime version of Tic Tac Dough is reminiscent of its tactics in radio: installing night segments of a series that had proved itself on a daytime schedule.

One of the more successful nighttime extensions was Vic 'n' Sade (1938).

Here are some hard statistics about network tv vs. magazine business-hustling that may surprise you:

Life Magazine alone employs a bigger sales staff than the three tv networks put together. Life's total is 75; the networks', 59. By individual network, the sales personnel breaks down this way: NBC TV, 24; CBS TV, 18; and ABC TV, 17.

Gross billings for 1957: Life, $137.5 million; tv networks, $516.2 million.

A highly placed official in the tv selling field deplores the fiscal road that the tv networks are taking in making so many package (time and talent) deals this fall.

Terming some of the practices now in use as harmfully shortsighted, he believes:

- The wrong people are trying to sell a superior product.
- It's smarter to revise the rate than make deals.
- If a network absorbs the cost of the show just to clinch a time sale, it's depriving itself of the "fat" needed to improve the program structure.

Nothing else like it in Greater New York

NOTHING APPROACHES THE SOUND:

WVNJ originated the programming concept of Great Albums of Music. It is the only radio station in the metropolitan area that plays just Great Albums of Music from sign on to sign off every single day of the year.

NOTHING APPROACHES THE AUDIENCE:

The very nature of the music makes the audience preponderantly adult. It's a rich audience, too. In one of the wealthiest counties of America (Essex—with its million plus population) WVNJ is first in 27 out of 34 rated periods from 7 AM till midnight. It is tied for first in three more. According to Pulse it has more listeners here than any station in New Jersey and New York as well.

NOTHING APPROACHES ITS VALUE:

WVNJ delivers its adult, able-to-buy, greater New York audience for less cost per thousand homes than any other station in the market. By every reasoning it's your very best buy.

SPONSOR SPEAKS

Examine your local rates

SPONSOR's lead article this week (see page 27) highlights a common human problem: sometimes even the best causes are viewed with suspicion because of the people who espouse them.

Many important agencies, advertisers, and station representatives are now urging radio and tv stations to adopt clearer, more reasonable, and more rigid policies on local rates.

The problem does not apply, of course, to single-rate stations. Nor is the national rate an issue. What's involved is simply a request that stations with double or triple rates explain in unmistakable terms "who gets the local rate, and why?"

But, according to reports reaching SPONSOR, many stations are hesitant to do this. They doubt the motives of those who seem strongest for local rate reforms, and fear that pressure is being put upon them for purely selfish reasons.

SPONSOR can well understand these fears. In the past, many radio and tv stations have been victimized by sweet-talking do-gooders who professed to be carrying an olive branch but were actually hiding a chisel.

But the recent agitation for more sensible local rate policies does not belong in this category of pressures. SPONSOR's own impartial study reveals that advertisers and agencies are rightfully concerned over the local rate situation in many markets, and that present conditions are hurting both individual stations and the whole radio/tv industry.

SPONSOR strongly urges every radio and tv station (except those with a single rate) to 1) review carefully the kinds and types of accounts to which you are granting local rates; 2) decide whether your policy is sensible and reasonable in the light of modern conditions (your rep can give you information on what other stations in like circumstances are doing; 3) Revise your policy if that seems indicated; 4) Put it in writing; and 5) Stick to it no matter what.

THIS WE FIGHT FOR: Business-like methods for a big-business industry. Local rate fuziness hurts all radio and tv. Re-examine your own situation now, and be sure your own house is in order.

10-SECOND SPOTS

Touché: On Fifth Avenue the other day, not far from SPONSOR, a car was left in front of Saks store with a note pinned down by the windshield wiper that read, "Gone in to pick up something—Back in 10 minutes."

Considerably more than 10 minutes later, a policeman placed a parking ticket under the wiper, across which he wrote: "An hour is enough to pick up anything."

Efficiency: We just heard about the St. Louis agencyman who has a three-way letter file. Labels for the trays are: IN, OUT, and WHOOPS!

Turnabout: After 1 January, the NAB code forbids the portrayal of doctors or dentists by tv commercial actors. Okay, watch for AFTRA to rule against doctors or dentists turning tv actors.

Medic: A Boston doctor has come up with the theory that men suffer more from heart ailments than women because they sit in front of the tv set not using up calories while their wives use up their calories serving them with beer, pretzels, etc. It's not the calories that jar our blood pressure—it's Maverick drawing his gun.
